14 British Editors Discouraged Bishops Lindbergh for Hoover About Old Age

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

FOURTEEN able British newspaper men, led by Ralph D. Blumenfeld, editor-in-chief of the London Daily Express, are inspecting this country, invited by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

American publishers will welcome them and learn from them. British newspapermen know one thing very important. They know WHAT NOT TO DO.

So far as Britain and this country are concerned, there is no need to worry about peace. It's here and to stay War doesn't pay. And another war would nearly if not quite wipe out European civilization. Europe knows it.

Our friendship for Canada and that Canadian-United States border line, 3000 miles long, without a soldier or a fort on it, are the best proof that peace is natural among nations that speak English.

Their job is to persuade some of the others to be peaceful, whether they want to or NOT.

Agitation in British high church circles, and talk of disestablishment which would take dignitaries from the House of Lords and abolish the national church payroll. The Bishop of Gloucester says that "spiritual independence, even without a salary, would be better than being told what kind of prayer book you must have."

Another British bishop says the world is going to the dogs morally. "God has been driven out of the schools," he thinks, "and birth control is undermining the family and sacred marriage."

Unregenerate birth control advocates reply: "If you were trying to bring up twelve children on three pounds a week you'd change your mind."

Lindbergh wires Mr. Hoover: "Impossible leave Iowa to St. Louis to register. The more I see of this campaign, the more strongly I feel that good aviation is of supreme importance to the country."

That indorsement for many Americans, young and old, will outweigh the opinions of several important Wall Street men.

However, Democrats say not worrying, for Mr. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, assures them that Governor Smith will carry Illinois.

Every child knows that if Governor Smith carries Illinois, he will surely carry New York and Massachusetts, and be elected.

Senator Robinson repeats the Democratic statement that "Republican prosperity is a myth." He calls it "this Republican prosperity balloon." If there isn't any prosperity, who is buying gasoline for 24,000,000 automobiles running up and down?"

In California, four sons mourn the death of their father, Manuel Portes, chief of the Santa Rosa Indians, dead at 120.

His four sons are all past 90. That's interesting, but all five combined in their 500 odd life years lived less than Lindbergh lived in his 39 odd hours between New York and Paris.

Doctors discussing old age and how to attain it say: "All you do before 40 amounts to little. It's care and intelligence after 40 that counts." That can't be literally true, of course. If you ruin your constitution before 40, you can't repair the damage.

A wise doctor says to his middle-aged patients: "You can only keep what you have left. You can't add to it."

All men are told that if they begin to pay attention at 50, they may add years to their life.

Public spirited and scientifically interesting is the gift to science of a herd of high grade Holstein cattle by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, who will represent Illinois as Congressman-at-large presently.

The "experiments, it is hoped, will check common goitre.

Goitre is cured by iodine. Iodine is found in seaweed. Powdered seaweed is fed to the cows, they deposit the iodine in their milk, farewell goitre.

It isn't imagination. Chemical tests show that the milk of cows fed on powdered seaweed contains 806 parts of iodine in one million.

That will annoy some good ladies and gentlemen who say there is no such thing as sickness, therefore no such thing as a cure.

Perhaps if they had goitre their views would change.

The giant German dirigible, Count Zeppelin, twice as big as our Los Angeles, has made tests that amaze Europe, machinery working without a flaw, seventy passengers carried over Britain at nearly 100 miles an hour.

Soon that big air boat will be on its way to America. Another triumph for German enterprise, and the beginning of commercial transatlantic air travel.

MADE RUM AT DEER ISLAND

Results of former investigations, revealing that "shellac parties" were held at Deer Island and that prisoners made intoxicating beverages out of prunes and raisins, were turned to today in the probe of conditions at the harbor House of Correction.

According to testimony by James Regan of Brighton, who served a twelve years at the Deer Island, there was an occasion when prisoners stood around in a field and supplied themselves in separating alcohol from shellac.

Regan also testified during the previous probe that inmates became drunk at intervals and were addicted to drugs.

The story told by Regan on the witness stand at the last public probe of the House of Correction is said by critics to reflect present conditions which have caused such a rumpus since the attempted jail delivery last Sunday that Mayor Nichols has directed Philip A. Chapman, penal institutions commissioner to make a personal investigation and report to him.

GAME IN DETAIL

FIRST INNING

Cardinals—Hoyt's pitch was high and Douthit let it go by. The next was a perfect strike. Douthit hit a high foul back of first into the stands, Douthit let another build one pass. Douthit rolled an easy ground-er to Lazzeri and was out at first. Andy lifted a high fly to center. Frisch, former New Yorx hero, was given a great hand when he came up. DURIS CASE READY FOR GRAND JURY

Less than 48 hours after "Tommy" Duris was shot down in a room at the Hotel Brewster police inspectors investigating the affair were today prepared to go before a Suffolk grand jury with evidence believed sufficient to indict his assailant.

The man against whom the grill will be centered, whose identity they know is now being sought and will be summoned to testify with regard to the shooting, is Mike Sciarappa.

MEUSEL, RUTH, GEHRIG BAT OUT VICTORY

Yankee Stadium, Oct. 4—The mighty bats of Meusel, Ruth and Gehrig gave the Yankees first blood in the world's series today.

Exra base hits from the bats of this trio crushed the Cardinals, while 76,000 looked on under a bright, warm sun.

Wesley Ruffer held the Cards to three hits, struck out six, and kept the visitors from scoring after the second inning, but remained on first while the next three were out in order.

Both pitchers were showing a lot of stuff and there was little batting, when, in the second inning, Ruth opened with a single. Koenig sacrificed, Ruth taking second. Gehrig was purposely passed to first, filling the bases. Meusel hit a fast one to Bottomley, who walked at the start of the Yankees off to a one-run lead.

Again in the fourth Ruth smacked out another double and trotted home when Meusel banged the ball into the right field stands, for a home run, the first of the series.

The Yankees gave the Cardinals only one run in the seventh when he duplicated Meusel's stunt of sweeting the ball into the right field stands.

The Ruth-Gehrig combination gave the Yankees their first run in the fifth, when, with one out, Ruth walked. There was a long delay while Ruth stole second. Gehrig was purposely passed to first, filling the bases, but the Cardinals meanwhile were held hitless by Hoyt. The only Cardinal to reach first base in this span was Sunny Jim Bottomley, who walked at the start of the second inning, but remained on first while the next three were out in order.

ENTRENCHED MEN HAD PLENTY OF FOOD

Holy Trinity Greek Church in Lowell has been closed since early in July due to a war between two factions, still pending in Bay State courts. July 22 members of the faction of Bishop Komvopoulos entered the edifice and refused to leave. They were headed by the Rev. Considine Harmantas, who eventually departed, leaving the others on guard inside. Today, armed with a writ of replevin, the faction of Aristides Malicourtis, president of the Greek community, accompanied by a squad of ten police battered in the doors and routed the two men of the depleted garrison after alleged threats from one of them that he would shoot. The attackers found this place well provisioned for a siege as shown in the photos. James Kourkoulakos is shown with Patrolmen Levitt and Molloy in front of table laden with food that the garrison subsided upon. Patrolman Alfred J. Cooney is shown with guns seized in the church. AUTO VICTIM, 70, IN COURT

—Boston Evening American Staff Photo

Mrs. Mary J. Allen, 70, being carried into court by Policeman David Cummings and James G. Goddard. She was injured by an auto driven by Frank A. McCauley of Waltham. He was found guilty.

WOMAN TELLS OF CRASH

From a wheel chair, Mrs. Mary Jane Allen, 70, of Lowell st., Somerville, testified today in Newton court against Frank A. McCauley of High st., Waltham, alleged "hit-and-run" driver of the car that struck her last April.

Since the accident at Crafts and Washington sts., Newtonville, Mrs. Allen has been a patient at Newton Hospital. She suffered injuries to the head, thighs and legs and fractures of both legs.

She testified that when she was struck by the machine she lifted her head and called at the driver, "Don't leave me here." The autoist, however, drove away, she said.

Charles J. Kiley of Summit ave., Brighton, took the elderly woman to Newton hospital.

It was testified that McCauley returned to the scene of the accident and then went to Newton police headquarters and reported in person.

McCauley was found guilty of driving in a manner tending to endanger the lives and safety of the public. On the charge of driving away after an accident he was acquitted.

He appealed and was held in $1000 for superior court.

2 FALL 40 FEET AND MAY DIE

Joseph Toner of Rosseiair st., Dorchester, and Edward Morin of Cambria st., Back Bay, were injured, probably fatally, today. A staging on which they were working at the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, East Concord st. and Harrison ave., collapsed. They were thrown 40 feet to the ground.

John McAdams and John O'Malley of the City Hospital, who were passing, rushed the injured men to that institution, where both were found to have fractured skulls.

BULLET WOUND IN HEAD STARTS LOWELL INQUIRY

Lowell, Oct. 4—State Officers O'Neill and Sherlock today began an investigation of the death three weeks ago of Raphael Malo, 23, of Mt. Vernon st., manager of a chain store.

Malo was found in the cellar of the store. An X-ray revealed a bullet in the head from which he died. The police first decided the case was a suicide.

SUSPECT IS FACING ARREST

Chief Inspector Ainsley T. Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation has taken personal charge of the hunt.

At a conference in his office this morning, Inspector Harry Pierce of the Homicide Squad and Sergt. Jas. O'Neil of the Lagrange st. station, rehearsed the entire shooting episode as related to them by eye-witnesses and furnished Chief Armstrong with the name of the man who fired the shots.

As a result of the conference with Pierce and O'Neil, the bureau chief asserted that the weapon used by the assailant was not a regulation police revolver nor were the bullets of the type issued to Boston patrolmen.

"As far as the Duris shooting affair is concerned," Chief Armstrong declared after his conference with O'Neil and Pierce, "no angle of our investigation has shown that a police officer was present, in or near the Hotel Brewster room, when the murderous attack was made on the victim.

MAN KNOWN TO POLICE.

"I am satisfied that there is only one person wanted to complete the probe, and he is the assailant of Duris.

"The man sought is well known to the police, and, according to our records, has been associated with Duris for more than 10 years in several enterprises.

"Our investigation shows that Duris was shot in a personal quarrel between the two and the rumor that a regulation police pistol was used in the shooting is absolutely groundless.

"City Hospital records show that the calibre of the bullets which penetrated Duris' body were smaller than the regulation type issued to our patrolmen, while the slugs found in the hotel room were also different from ours.

WILL CONTINUE PROBE

"It is immaterial to us whether or not Duris makes a definite statement about what occurred in the room when he was shot. The police will proceed with their investigation just the same because they now have enough information to begin criminal proceedings against the missing assailant."

MRS. KNAPP, FREED, IS BACK AT BEDFORD HOME

Her 30-day sentence for grand larceny completed, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former secretary of state in New York, arrived today at the home of her sister, Mrs. Grace Palmer, at Bedford. She went to bed immediately and will stay there for several days, Mrs. Palmer said.

Plainly showing the effects of incarceration, Mrs. Knapp was released from the county jail at Albany on Tuesday and was met at the prison door by another sister, Mrs. Julia Smith. Both traveled by automobile from the New York capital city to Boston, an overnight stop for rest having been made in Springfield last night.

Mayor Favors Long As Head Of Airport

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols announced today he will introduce an order at the City Council meeting on Monday, providing that Chairman William P. Long of the Park Commission be given permanent control of the Boston Airport.

The mayor also announced he had abandoned hope of getting Lieut. Donald B. Duke of the Army air service to take charge of the Airport. He added he had offered the job to Adams, chairman of the Municipal Air Board, but it had been declined. According to the mayor, there are 12 candidates for the position.

PRINCE FLEES WITH BEAUTY

adventure was not identified, but was said to be the member of a wealthy and aristocratic Rumanian family.

Queen Marie and Princess Helen, the divorced wife of Carol, were understood to have sent urgent messages to Nicholas in Paris demanding that he return home, but they were disregarded.

Nicholas, who was 25 years old in August, was recently reported in London. It was rumored at the time that his mother, Queen Marie, might become engaged to marry a rich American, and that he was enlisting the aid of the English royal family to try to prevent her from making her contemplated visit to the United States.

LOVE TANGLES OF CAROL.

Carol, who has been married twice, once morganatically, was divorced by his wife, Princess Helen, several months ago. A report was current in Brussels recently that he would marry Mme. Magda Helene Lupescu, a beautiful red-haired Rumanian Jewess, with whom he has been living for five years.

Carol and Helen are the parents of little six-year-old King Michael.

Princess Ileana, sister of Carol and Nicholas, who is 18 years old, was reported six months ago to have eloped with a Rumanian army officer. They were said to have taken passage on a Black sea vessel in disguise, but were discovered. The princess, according to the report, was brought back to Bucharest under the watchful eye of her mother.

Shortly afterward the Queen and Ileana left for Spain, but the trip was cancelled for some mysterious reason.

One daughter of Marie is Queen of Jugoslavia and another was Queen of Greece until the republican movement upset the Athens throne.

The love affairs of the Rumanian royal family have engaged the attention of Europe for years.

JUDGE GOOD INDUCTED IN MUNICIPAL COURT

In a ceremony attended by members of bench and bar, Judge Francis J. Good of Cambridge, former State commander of the American Legion, was formally inducted into office as a justice of the Municipal Court today. Notice of appointment was read by Clerk William F. Donovan. On the bench with Judge Good were Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster and Associate Justices Parmenter, Dowd and Cohen. A bank of flowers, gift of relatives and friends, was presented the new justice.

PIN 'DEATH SHOT' ON HOPPE

The bullet that killed Patrolman Alfred N. Hollis of Quincy is of the same make and bears the same markings as those found in the suit-case of Stephen Hoppe, now on trial in Superior Court at Dedham for the murder, according to Capt. Charles M. van Amburg of the State police.

Capt. Van Amburg, a firearms expert, who figured prominently in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, showed enlarged photographs which he said revealed the entwined letters F and T on the base of the bullets.

All the bullets are of German manufacture and in addition to the letters of them Capt. Van Amburg said he found the initials D. W. A., a manufacturer's symbol, on the cartridges of all of them.

FATHER IS PRESENT.

Hoppe's father, Henry Hoppe, was in the courtroom for the first time since the trial began, but neither his presence nor the fact that today was the anniversary of the murder had any noticeable effect on the defendant, who still maintains an air of detached interest.

Martin J. Barrett, for more than 30 years assistant turnkey at Dedham jail, told the jury of two attempts by Hoppe to escape while awaiting trial.

TWO MEN SHOT.

Guards found the bars of Hoppe's cell, No. 13, cut and about eight inches of the brick wall dislodged on August 15, Barrett said. On September 8 came the second attempt when, before Hoppe was subdued, two trusties were shot by a guard.

Walter A. Ridley, the guard who shot the trusties, thinking they were aiding Hoppe, was the next witness.

"I had been relieved of duty by Guard Grennan when I heard a commotion and looking out of my room the first thing I saw was Hoppe with a revolver in his hand, outside his cell," said Ridley.

"I slipped back into my room and put on my trousers. I then looked over the railing and saw Hoppe and Brennan in a clinch. Then Hoppe fired his revolver. I went back and got my revolver.

"I'M NO KID."

"Hoppe and Brennan were struggling and after something happened the committed reference to his shooting, I went down and assisted shoving Hoppe into a cell."

Thomas J. Brennan testified he was struggling with Hoppe on the cell tier when there was a flash beside his face, followed by a report, and Hoppe cried, "They's got me. Brennan said he retorted, "Yes, and I've got you."

Following two more shots, two trusties fell, mortally wounded.

"Don't think I'm a kid," said Hoppe when he was finally subdued, according to Brennan.

HUB SHIP LANDS 27 RESCUED

Twenty-seven men composing the crew of the foundered fishing trawler Filet, James Mackay of East Boston, captain, were taken to New London today by the Coast Guard destroyer Ferry.

Capt. Mackay said his boat left New York Tuesday night for Georges Bank, but sprang aleak off Montauk Point, L. I., early yesterday and took water faster than the crew could pump it out.

When it was seen the ship could not be saved, the flares were dumped and the men took to small boats. The trawler sank.

They were picked up by the steamship America, enroute to Philadelphia, and later were transferred to the Ferry.

A premonition of the ship's sinking came to the captain's wife, Mrs. J. F. Mackay of Marion st., East Boston, she revealed today.

HAILS FLIGHT AS OPENING NEW EPOCH

(Copyright, 1928, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Aboard Graf Zeppelin on endurance flight over the North Sea, Oct. 3—(By radio to Berlin.)—It was a bitter cold night in the Graf Zeppelin. We have a million cubic feet of gas but no heat.

It is a strange sensation sleeping in cabins attached to a gas bag swinging 7000 feet in the air between the moon and the glassy North Sea.

That is the experience of "Katinka" von Kardorff, former member of the German Reichstag, and myself, who are enjoying the privileges and distinction of being the first two women to spend a night in a giant airship.

Speeding into the teeth of chilly winds all day at varying altitudes through clammy clouds, momentary bursts of sunshine and dense fogs over the upturned faces of many cities and towns, 20 men and two women in overcoats and furs suffered much from the cold, in no wise detracting, however, from their eager enthusiasm at an extraordinary experience which promises to become eventually the ideal means of long distance travel.

BITTERLY COLD

While the trip offers uncounted sensations, emotions of fear or feelings of insecurity were entirely absent.

"The only danger to life around this craft is freezing to death," remarked Ratinka ruefully to me.

Luncheon on the airship reminds one of the mad tea party of Alice in Wonderland. Between courses and between mouthfuls, there are excited people rising up with cries of delight at each unfolded panorama. Four o'clock found the meal unfinished. ATTORNEY GETS JAIL TERM FOR THEFT

Attorney Samuel Levy of Fayston st., Roxbury, found guilty on two counts of larceny from clients, totaling $1585, by Judge Zottoli, was sentenced in municipal court today to 18 months in the House of Correction. Levy appealed and gave $3000 bond.

One count charged larceny of $1500 from Mrs. Alice Jennings of Baxter st., South Boston, widow of a Canadian war veteran and mother of four children. According to the evidence Levy settled a claim on an insurance company for injuries suffered by her son in an automobile accident, and failed to give her the money.

The second count charged larceny of $85 from William G. Benson of Huntington ave., an investigator formerly employed by Levy. It was shown that Levy settled an automobile case for Benson, converting the money to his own use.

Since the complaint was drawn evidence was produced showing that Levy had paid Benson $100, but both denied it was in settlement of the claim.

6 INJURED IN REVERE CRASH; DRIVER HELD

Hopping on the running board of a passing automobile, Patrolman Robert Barry of Revere, according to the police, today overtook and arrested a motorist half a mile from the scene of an accident in which six persons were injured.

The arrested driver, Frank Moran, 28, of Waldon st., Cambridge, was charged with driving under the influence of liquor and drunkenness.

The injured persons, who were riding in a touring car into which Moran's machine is said to have crashed in a rear-end collision, were:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Yuill, Maple pl., Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Peabody, Sheehan ct., Lynn.

Walter Yuill, four, and Edith Yuill, two.

The two women and the children were tossed out of the car by the impact when the two machines came together on Broadway, Revere, near Page st. Patrolman Barry, a new officer, was about to ring in his signal box nearby and witnessed the accident.

SIMMONS GIRLS SCORE BIG WITH BOW AND ARROW

Archery is booming these fine fall days at the Boston Woman's College, where Doris Franklin of Newport, R. I., directs the team. From the appearance of the target good hits are often made, though bullseyes are, of course, scarce.

Chef Nearly Starves, Locked in Car Full of Canned Food

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4 (AP)—Edward Connelly, 38, a chef, was surrounded by food for seven days and yet, he said today, he nearly starved to death.

Connelly found himself locked in a boxcar which was shunted to a lonesome siding. The car was loaded with boxes of canned food.

When his pounding on the door finally brought rescue, Connelly explained that he had feared to break into the food because it might be thought he was stealing. When hunger finally drove him to it he had lost his knife and could not open the boxes.

GRANDMA, HIT BY BIG TRUCK, SAVES BABY

Confined to City hospital with painful injuries, the only thought of Mrs. Mamie Okun of Crowell st., Dorchester, today was of her two-year-old grandchild, Marilyn Wishnow, whose life she saved by pushing the baby carriage from the path of a truck.

The baby escaped with minor injuries, but Mrs. Okun was run down and one leg was crushed by the heavy vehicle.

"I don't know what happened to the baby," she said. "I hope and pray she is safe. When I saw the truck bearing down on baby and me I pushed the carriage back to the sidewalk. Then the truck hit me and that is all I remember." She was overjoyed when told little Marilyn was all right.

Mrs. Okun, wheeling her grandchild on Blue Hill ave., was about to cross the street when a truck operated by Max Baron of Kerwin st., Dorchester, bore down on her. She thrust the carriage out of the path of the machine, but was cut down herself.

GENE AND POLLY HONEYMOON ON 'BASKET LUNCH'

Perugia, Italy, Oct. 4 (INS)—Under conditions romantically ideal, Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world, and his handsome bride, the former Mary Josephine "Polly" Laudar, today began the first day of their honeymoon in this beautiful little hamlet.

Upon their arrival here, Mrs. Tunney explained to the hotel manager that she had stayed at the Hotel Brufani before, and remembered it because she had always wished to spend the first night of her honeymoon amid its scenic beauty.

Gene was more matter of fact.

"Thank God, there aren't any newspapermen here in person us," he said. "I was afraid we'd find a crowd of them awaiting us."

Gene and his bride breakfasted at 10 o'clock today. Despite a heavy rainstorm they set out shortly afterward in their limousine on the road to the St. Francis Assisi Convent, taking with them a basket of cold lunch.

There were no photographers, a fact which seemed to please Tunney very much. The honeymooners expected to reach Florence tonight, unless the rain interfered with their plans.

Coolidges Hold Their Last 'Wedding Day' in White House

Washington, Oct. 4 (AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge celebrated today their 23rd wedding anniversary—their last one in the White House.

Both had carefully avoided special preparations for the occasion, telling friends they wished to observe this anniversary in the same manner as they had observed all previous ones. They wished it to be a quiet family occasion, free from all show or artificiality.

Mrs. Coolidge left the bedside of her ill mother in Northampton, Mass., Tuesday to continue her practice of 23 years' standing of being in her own home every 4th of October.

Mr. Coolidge promised Mrs. Coolidge that he would abandon work earlier than usual this afternoon.

HOOVER WILLING MELLON STAYS

Washington, Oct. 4 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon is well satisfied with his present work and has given no thought to changing, he said today in discussing reports that he had been selected to retain his post as Secretary of the Treasury in case Herbert Hoover is elected President.

The secretary added that if Mr. Hoover had decided he should again head the finance department of the Government he knew nothing of it.

"At my age I might as well work here as anywhere else," he said. "I have made no plans about retiring," all.

SMITH ANXIOUS OVER BORDER STATES

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Correspondent

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 4—No one realizes any more keenly than Governor Smith the importance of the Border States to the Democratic cause in the forthcoming November election.

Consequently he is giving very careful personal attention to the business of deciding upon the second major speaking trip of his campaign.

The itinerary possibly will be announced tomorrow. Unless there are 11th hour changes, it will start early next week at Raleigh, N. C., and continues to Chattanooga, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; Sedalia, Mo.; Chicago, Cleveland or Columbus, O., with Baltimore probably near the end of the tour.

This would take the Democratic nominee into every border state, where the issue is admittedly doubtful. He already has appeared in Oklahoma.

Some of the border states are necessary to the Smith candidacy if it is to be successful. It figures out this way:

There are 114 electorial votes in the solid South, in states which never have given their electorial vote to a Republican presidential candidate.

In five border states—Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Missouri—count 61 more, or 175 in all.

WOMAN LEADER TELLS WHY SHE BACKS SMITH

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

In her capacity as a professional woman, Mrs. Katherine Filene Dodd, daughter of A. Lincoln Filene, today endorsed Governor Smith for President.

Mrs. Dodd is director of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations. The institute is making a study of the economic and social status of the professional and semi-professional women.

She declared that in her connection with her work she has become familiar with the attitude of both Hoover and Smith toward the professional women and that she found Governor Smith has given equal economic opportunity to women.

She gave these five reasons why Smith should be elected:

1—His long experience in public office is such that he can be counted on to fulfill his promises. His record is proof.

2—Without the support of Congress a President can accomplish nothing. Governor Smith has shown that he can get the support of both parties on vital issues. Hoover has shown no such power. He has lacked in courage and has become an opportunist rather than a leader.

3—Under Governor Smith we will have an honest and efficient enforcement of all laws, social as well as economic. He has made this his business.

4—Governor Smith never acts without consulting those who are outstanding in the particular field under consideration. He has an open mind on all matters, national and international.

5—I believe in Governor Smith's plan for the reorganization of the government. The need is obvious to all who have made this a concern. Governor Smith can and has made Government understanding to the people. By simplifying and clarifying intricate legislative matters, he has made government a living interest to those outside political groups."

CODMAN ARENA SUIT DISMISSED

Defeated in Superior Court, Conrad Crooker, counsel for Codman, had taken an appeal to Supreme Court.

SUES FATHER-IN-LAW FOR $10,000 AS "BALM"

A $10,000 suit alleging alienation of the affections of her husband, William Whittington, was filed today in Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham by Mrs. Ina Whittington of Canton against her father-in-law, Alonzo E. Whittington of the same place. In her bill of complaint Mrs. Whittington charges that the elder Whittington supplied her husband with intoxicating liquor on several occasions and harbored him in his home while under the influence of liquor.

She further alleges that her husband deserted her and her children on the recommendation of his father following her repeated objections to the presence of the husband in an intoxicated condition on the father's premises.

THREE ARE ATTACKED BY VICIOUS DOGS IN LYNN

Three persons, including a little girl and a policeman, were victims of vicious dogs in Lynn today. Virginia Agnew, 2 years, of Salem st., was bitten while at play near her home. Reserve Officer Daniel Sherry, walking on Astor st., was bitten on the right leg by an Airedale which he beat off with his club but which escaped before the policeman could shoot.

On Sheridan st., George Shaughnessy of Linden st., Dorchester, was chased onto a veranda by a dog which held him there until two men drove it away.

SMITH ORDERS 'RITUAL DEATH' QUERY PROBED

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP)—At the order of Governor Smith, a thorough investigation of what has become known as the "Massena incident," involving the questioning of a Jewish rabbi there on a rumor of ritual murder, was in full swing today.

Lieut. Edward F. Haim and Corp. McCann of Troop B, state police, were ordered to report immediately to Maj. John A. Warner, superintendent of troopers and second-in-command of the Governor, to explain their side of the case growing out of the questioning of Rabbi Burlinglass.

The incident came to light with the protest of Louis Marshall, president of the American Jewish committee, over the questioning of the rabbi, which Mr. Marshall termed an "unspeakable calumny" against the Jewish race.

Mr. Marshall's protest, in a published letter to Mayor W. Gilbert Hawes of Massena, demanded publ lic apology of that official, the letter declared that on Saturday, September 22, two days before Yom Kippur the Mayor "arranged" for troopers to interrogate Rabbi Burlinglass "on the intolerable assumption that the Jews required the blood of Christian children on their holy days," and that this requirement had had some connection with the disappearance of four-year-old Barbara Griffith from her Massena home. She was found the following day in a nearby woods where she had strayed.

Man and Wife Shocked to Death Fixing Radio

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 4 (AP)—An attempt to remove a discarded radio aerial wire from a power line carrying 4000 volts caused the death of a man and his wife as neighbors helplessly looked on.

Frank Gervaeris saw his wife attempting to remove the sputtering wire with a mop handle. He ran from his car, seized the stick and just as his wife warned him that the wire was alive it dangled off the mop handle and twisted around his wrist. He fell to the ground with the wire still around him, while his wife threw her arms about him and also received the full force of the electric current.

The wire had been tossed aside by carpenters who earlier in the day had been shingling the roof.

HOOVER HAS BIG LEAD IN STRAW VOTE OF THE CORN BELT

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Noted Political Analyst

Chicago, Oct. 4—Gains for Hoover in Oklahoma, Nebraska and Idaho, a pronounced bulge in the Smith percentage in Montana, and only slight fluctuations in the percentage columns in Minnesota and Wisconsin, summarize the reactions to Governor Smith's Western tour as disclosed in the Hearst nation-wide poll figures today.

Hoover, who was in the lead at the start of the campaign in Oklahoma, has increased his percentage of the total vote from 61.4, the figure the day after the Smith Omaha speech, to 63 per cent today.

These figures tally with the general opinion prevailing throughout the state and so reported to both Republican and Democratic national headquarters. The Oklahoma people by Governor Smith, one trustworthy adviser reports, was intended for Eastern consumption more than for its local effect on the Oklahoma sector.

CONCEDED TO G. O. P.

This border state probably should be taken out of the doubtful column definitely and given to Hoover as of November 6.

Idaho, too, is safely conceded to the Republicans in the face of both canvass and reports from all sections of the state. While there are a few tough spots yet to be appraised there is nothing in the situation to indicate any material gains for the Democratic ticket in the closing weeks of the battle.

While there has not been much fluctuation in the Dakotas and Minnesota, developments coincident with the Governor's tour may yet cause upheavals there of major purport.

It is the mechanics of politics rather than issues that portend a possible development in the next couple of weeks that may rouse largely to the benefit of Governor Smith.

BIG DEAL IN MINNESOTA

In North Dakota Governor Sorlie recently died. This was after the primary and after Lieut.-Gov. Walter Maddock, elected as a Republican, had succeeded to the governorship. The Republicans had nominated their candidate for governor in the primary.

But just about the time Governor Smith's train was pulling into Minneapolis Governor Maddock decided to accept the Democratic nomination for governor, which was tendered him by a majority of the Democratic State executive committee of North Dakota.

In Minnesota a big deal is on between the Farmer-Labor forces and the Democrats. George F. Cashman of St. Cloud, regularly nominated Democratic candidate for United States Senator, has withdrawn from the field, with the purpose of throwing the Farmer-Labor vote to Senator Henrik Shipstead. The implication is that the Shipstead forces will reciprocate by throwing their support to Governor Smith.

HOOVER GAINS

What is happening in North Dakota and Minnesota is the amalgamation, so far as the respective party spokesmen can effect it, of the Democratic and La Follette vote of 1924, which in North Dakota was greater than the Coolidge vote in North Dakota, and in Minnesota was only a few thousand votes less.

It will be a couple of weeks yet before the effect of this deal can be observed in the trends.

Both North Dakota and Minnesota, in the meantime can safely be retained in the doubtful column.

Hoover has gained slightly in the Wisconsin Hearst poll, but Smith still is in the lead, and the turning down of the La Follette national committeemen by the national committee heads at Washington may bring the La Follette leaders, particularly former Atty.-Gen. Ekern, out in the open for Smith.

Wisconsin, as of today, is still rather securely anchored to the Tammany show boat.

Politicians Uncertain About N. Dakota

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 4 (AP)—Just as the Democrats have awakened to the seriousness of the anti-Smith movement in the South, so the Republicans here in the Northwestern states no longer speak of the anti-Hoover farm movements as a myth. They realize that through Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas they must turn in and fight, and they are doing it.

North Dakota is one of the states both parties are claiming just now with much earnestness. But on both sides these claims are coupled with a reminder that much work remains to be done before election day, and there are leaders among the Republicans and Democrats alike who say quite candidly, when they speak privately, that if the election were held today it might very well turn out a horse race.

Thus has tradition become disturbed in a state which four years ago stood by Coolidge in the face of the La Follette crusade and gave LaVoIs only 13,000 votes out of a total of nearly 300,000.

Since Nov. 1, 1920, there have been 307 permanent failures among the North Dakota state banks. Land values have decreased, and present wheat prices do not help the Republican campaign.

Three months ago a proposal to repeal the state prohibition amendment was lost 96,537 to 103,866.

ACCUSE MRS. CALDWELL OF ANTI-CATHOLIC SPEECH

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 4 (AP)—Democratic county headquarters here made public an affidavit in which it was charged that Mrs. Willie W. Caldwell, Republican national committeewoman for Virginia, in a speech last April, made a direct attack against Governor Smith because of his membership in the Roman Catholic church. Mrs. Caldwell was quoted as saying:

"Don't let Al Smith, slum born, rum-raised, a wet Irish Catholic, get to the White House."

The affidavit was made by George V. Kelley, Tazewell county cattle raiser, who said Mrs. Caldwell's speech was delivered at Tazewell, Va., April 21, 1928.

CALLED SNOOPER

Elizabeth Heizer, New York newspaper investigator, asks $50,000 of Hoover's southern manager, charging that he falsely accused her of snooping around Republican headquarters.

HOOVER FIGURES REAL BATTLE IN EAST

Washington, Oct. 4 (AP)—His attention centered now upon the present exigencies of the campaign, Herbert Hoover is leaving to the future his precise program for the closing days of the presidential contest.

His chief concern in the eastern section of the country, from which he receives varying reports, some of these are of a very pessimistic nature while others are less gloomy.

Assessing the whole, Hoover is convinced that the real fight is along the eastern Atlantic seaboard, from Jersey to Maine, and his efforts are directed toward strengthening the party there.

Leaders in that section believe that his personal visits to New York city and New England will be of great benefit and that after his personal conferences and his two addresses, one in New York and the other in Boston, there will be a rising tide of support for the national ticket.

Such party warhorses as Moses of New Hampshire and Reed of Pennsylvania have frankly told the candidate that persistent work must be done in the east if the party is to hold ground which in national elections it usually has been reasonably certain of long before election day.

The situation in the south also is one to which Hoover is directing some of his energies and his personal bid for support in that section will be made Saturday in his visits to Elizabethton and Johnson City, Tenn.

The west is by no means being neglected with the campaign there being pressed vigorously by Senator Curtis and by Senator Borah, who is covering much of the territory traversed by the Democratic presidential candidate.

STOCKS PRICES ARE TOO HIGH, SAYS RASKOB

New York, Oct. 4 (INS)—John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman and former chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corporation, denied today his reported participation in the stock market and expressed the opinion that stock prices are entirely too high.

Correcting statements that for some have accredited recent spectacular advances in certain securities to his activity in the stock market, Raskob described such reports as without foundation for "two good reasons."

Firstly, he explained, he has not been near his office since resigning his post with the General Motors Corporation, nor has he purchased any stock whatsoever.

"In the second place," Raskob explained, "it is my opinion that security prices have so far outrun demonstrated values, earnings and dividend returns, that a material readjustment is necessary before they will again be attractive to the prudent investor."

Dividend rates are low and money rates are high, in his opinion. The course of the bond market was taken by Raskob as giving a good indication of where the investor stands in relation to the present security prices.

Expert Tells Hoover Farm Relief World-Wide Problem

Washington, Oct. 4 (INS)—The farm relief problem, which has become a major issue of the presidential campaign, is common to all the rest of the world, Herbert Hoover was informed today by Prof. Otto Heinrich, noted economist and member of the German Reichstag.

Hoover and Heotzschen discussed the farm problem at length and were said to have agreed that the problem of placing agriculture on an economic equality with commerce and industry was the cure for agricultural ailments, both here and abroad.

The German economist declared the farmers of Europe and Asia were confronted with the same conditions as those of the United States, namely, that they were forced to pay higher prices for manufactured articles than they received for the products of their farms.

PARIS MAGNET FOR NEWLYWEDS, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Arthur Richardson and Bride to Journey to French Capital After Marriage Saturday; Planning to Reside There Several Years

ALL HONEYMOON PATHS LEAD TO PARIS. THE SIREN CITY ON THE SEINE STANDS HIGH favorite on every honeymoon itinerary. Among the coupon-cutting ones occupying the highest social peaks it is quite unthinkable not to spend several weeks of the lune de miel in the fascinating atmosphere of Paris. If a month can be devoted thus, or several, just so much happier are the newlyweds. Young Mr. Arthur Richardson and the girl he makes his bride on Saturday next go the usual fashionable foreign honeymoon one better. He weds Miss Hope Iselin Livermore, daughter of the Philip W. Livermores of New York and Long Island, and then sails away for a lengthy honeymoon in Paris that will stretch not through months but years. Mr. Richardson would pursue a course at the Beaux Arts and for the next four years they will live in the French capital.

THEY ALREADY HAVE A CHARMING APARTMENT ALL FURNISHED AND ARRANGED FOR THEIR coming. And after the small ceremonial on late Saturday afternoon that unites aristocratic Boston with New York beauty, the long and interesting honeymoon commences. There is an exodus from Boston of the Frederick L. W. Richardsons to see a son and brother married. Mrs. Richardson and her lovely daughter, Miss Margery Richardson, already have departed for the big city. Miss Richardson will be one of the bride's entourage at the Church of the Advent in Westbury for the late afternoon ceremonial before only the two families and closest friends. And then there will be a reception at the bride's maternal grandparents' estate, "Bois Joli," at Glen Head.

ROSE-CHEEKED MISS RICHARDSON WILL BE IN LONG ISLAND SUFFICIENTLY IN ADVANCE OF the wedding itself to participate in some of its pre-nuptial felicities. Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Auchincloss, stepfather and mater to Miss Rosamond Auchincloss, who is a bridesmaid, gave a bridal dinner, and this evening Mr. and Mrs. De Lancey Kountze give the bridal festivity, which will include in its company their daughter, Miss Martha Kountze, also a bride attendant. Otherwise the entourage will have as particularly starry adornments Miss Lily Cushing, Miss Mary Ames, Miss Anita Potts, Miss Audrey Maynard, Miss Evelyn Whitehouse, Miss Hope Hollins and Miss Edith Hope Iselin, a prepossessing melange of femininity to walk before the bride. They are some of Boston's and New York's fairest.

OUT-OF-TOWN WEDDINGS, TWO IN NUMBER AND HIGHLY important in fashion's circles, interest Miss Barbara Forbes of Hamilton and take here away to Baltimore. Miss Forbes has been in the South for three weeks or so, going first to Wilmington for a Dupont nuptial and thence to Baltimore, where on Saturday Duncan Thayer marries Miss Priscilla Pinckney McHenry. First families of Massachusetts and Maryland are united by the Thayer-McHenry alliance. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Eliot Thayer of Boston and Southboro, and so kin to practically every highly placed family here in town. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John N. McHenry of Baltimore and blood of asure hue flows in her veins. Miss Virginia Gardner, whose brother, Harrison Gardner, married the former Miss Eloise Lawrence only last Saturday, also is an attendant for Miss McHenry.

MISS McHENRY AND MR. THAYER PLIGHT THEIR TROTH IN historic old St. Thomas' Church in Maryland's lovely Green Spring Valley. Ever so many Baltimore brides before Miss McHenry have said their vows within its hallowed walls, for sentiment's sake as well as beauty's. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, and fair maids to the number of a dozen will attend her to the flower-banked altar. Mr. Thayer's entourage is most imposing. Fellow members of his Harvard class and his clubs, including Boston's most high, the Somerset, will do the honors. Nineteen hundred and twenty-three was his graduating year at the Cambridge university, and his clubs, aside from the Somerset, include the Tennis and Racquet, the Harvard and Exchange. During the war Mr. Thayer wore the Navy blue, choosing to serve afloat with the young men who constituted the Naval Reserve.

SELECTED FOR USHER DUTY
Miss Eleanor Perkins will be an usher when the S. P. C. C.'s Junior Division gives its 50th anniversary dinner October 17. —Boston Evening American Staff Photo.

ON THE FRONT SEAT OF William H. Vanderbilt's handsome coach Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church looked pretty as a picture when Mr. Vanderbilt showed his handsome grays and the Venture at Brockton yesterday. An indefatigable exhibitor is Mrs. Church; and a blue ribbon winner. She carried off first honors in the Ladies' Phaeton Class and fooled her pair, Dragon Fly and Woodcliffe Surprise, with expert hand, winning over other contestants and their sleek entries. Mrs. Church's handsome "Chipmunk" yesterday was guided about the ring by no less a horseman than Samuel Shaw of Brookline. "Chipmunk" has appeared in many shows, usually as a special exhibition, to which he is well suited.

WELD, MRS. LARZ ANDERSON'S estate in Brookline, looked at its loveliest heat yesterday. Greenaward was velvet smooth and brilliant, and the Italian Garden's vistas florally perfect for any occasion, social or philanthropical. Mrs. Anderson herself, in modish deep purple frock and chapeau, saw to it that wheels revolved with utmost smoothness for the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange sale. Pleasant skies permitted the al fresco setting, much to patrons' pleasure and greatly increasing the informality necessary to such philanthropic occasions. Mrs. Anderson and her popular spouse entertained at luncheon before the sale, and afternoon tea in the pergola added its festive touch. Financial returns were excellent, as is usually the way when disabled men's wares are set out for purchase.

AND, OF COURSE, GEN. CLARENCE EDWARDS and Mrs. Edwards were on hand, the latter much elated at the sale's success and its financial returns. As well she may be. The fame of the Exchange reaches afar, and disabled men in almost all of the 48 States are sending their work to it. Since it is the only one of its sort in the country and in a healthy and flourishing concern, Mrs. Edwards has every right to be elated. The Exchange owes its existence to her inspiration and ceaseless endeavor. Mrs. Timothee Adamowska, Mrs. Charles Royce Butler, Mrs. Carrol Swan, Miss Edith and Miss Caroline Ticknor, Mrs. Edward Mauran Reals, these are some of the devoted souls who engineer such a sale and bring in the shekels that the disabled may still have their places in the world of men.

ENTER THE JUNIOR LEAGUE on its winter of "assisting" here and there. When the Junior Division, S. P. C. C., has its ceremonial dinner at the Hotel Statler in celebration of a 50th anniversary, Miss Eleanor Perkins, Miss Isabel Grandin, Miss Louise Waterman and Miss Priscilla Waterman, Miss Betty Thomas, Miss Jane Megrew, Miss Harriet White and Miss Eleanor Clark will represent the League and do the ushering. Miss Elizabeth Beal and Miss Margaret Bent will supervise, and Mrs. George Saltonstall West will be the general chairman for this celebration observance. October 17 is the date.

SHELLAC DRINKING AND DRUG PARTIES AT DEER ISLAND

Bates, State commissioner of correction, are to conduct independent inquiries.

In the former investigation, Hogan was examined by Commissioner Bates and Edward C. R. Bagley, who alternated in their interrogation.

Commissioner Bates—On August 29 you were in solitary for getting drunk? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you get the liquor? A.—We made it in the dining room out of prunes, raisins and stuff and water.

Q.—Where did you make it? A.—Up over the chapel.

Q.—In the Hill Prison? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is there a room on top of the chapel? A.—Yes, sir.

Mr. Bagley—There is an old sewing room and two or three class rooms.

Q.—How many in there making it at a time? A.—Three of us.

Q.—How many times have you been locked up altogether? A.—Three or four.

Q.—What for? A.—The same thing, drinking.

Q.—Was the stuff made up in the dining room all the time? A.—Yes, make it and drink it.

Q.—Was it made in the dining room? A.—No, another time it was made in the prison.

Q.—Did you help them in the making? A.—No. I don't know how to make it.

Q.—Somebody else made it? A.—They made it and I drank it.

Q.—How was it made? A.—In a bucket.

Q.—How long after it was made were you locked up? A.—The same day.

Q.—Have you been drinking down here at any time when you go away with it and wasn't caught? A.—I was drinking one Saturday when I wasn't caught, when it was given to me.

Q.—Once when you weren't caught? A.—I went to my cell, that's all. The other three times I was locked up.

Q.—Where can they get all the prunes and raisins you spoke of, necessary to make a bucketful of "prune juice?" A.—They have prunes for supper sometimes. When you are working in the dinning room you can make it from the stuff that is there.

Q.—You have got to put something else in to make it intoxicating, besides prunes and water? A.—Prunes and water, that's what I know. They put something in it. It was sickening anyway. I know you could see it right in the bucket. It was prunes.—

Q.—Let me ask if anything was stolen—any shellac that you know of out of the store room? A.—to make the moonshine?

Q.—Yes. A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—Do you know of anything that has been stolen? A.—Yes, some shellac.

Q.—When was that? A.—A long time ago.

Mr. Bates.—They had a shellac party in the field.

Mr. Bagley.—Didn't they separate the alcohol from the shellac? A.—Oh, yes, in that way.

Mr. Bates—That was Friedman, Cook and McCarthy? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever see any officers under the influence of liquor? A.—Any officers?

Q.—Yes, officers? A.—No.

Q.—Do you mean that you never did. Now be honest. A.—No, I never saw any.

Q.—Do you know any officer down there that was drunk or had been drinking? A.—No.

Commr. Bates—You have had a pretty stormy time of it down here? A.—Yes.

Fellow There Gave Him Shot of Dope With Pin

Q.—Did you ever take drugs before you came down here? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How did you take it, eat it? A.—Ate it sometimes and a pin sometimes.

Q.—With a pin? A.—With a pin, yes sir.

Q.—Where did you take it? A.—In the arm and leg.

Q.—Who gave you the idea? A.—When I first came here, there was a fellow here had it. I was working in the dining room and I used to feed him.

Q.—You used to give him extra food? A.—A sandwich now and then.

Q.—And he gave you drugs in return? A.—No. One Sunday I had a cold; I was playing ball and took it. That was a year ago last summer.

Q.—Did he show you how? A.—He did it.

Q.—He gave you a shot in return for food you gave him? A.—No, not in return. I don't thinks so, unless he meant it that way. I was giving it to him anyway.

Q.—Did you go and hide somewhere to do it? A.—yes, we went out the side. I was up in the other prison.

Q.—Is that fellow here now? A.—No, he has gone out. That was a year last summer.

Q.—Have you gotten it from other sources? A.—Just the time it was given to me; that's all. I never had no money to get it.

Q.—How many different fellows have you gotten it from? A.—Four or five, probably.

Q.—Have you gotten it from any fellows who are in here now? A.—No, there is no one here now. It was only a few months ago. I haven't seen them now for two months. They say they get sick after they take it a year or six months.

Q.—I don't want you to tool on anybody and I don't want you to say anything that you are not perfectly ready and willing to say; but you must know that any fellow who does anything like that to another man is no friend of his. He may pose as your friend, but he's your enemy? A.—Yes, I suppose that's the way they begin.

Q.—So, there is nothing wrong in helping Major Mulcahy and the rest of the people down here to stop that practice is there? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Have you any idea where this stuff comes from, how it gets on the island? A.—We have it once in a while. A fellow will have two cubes once in a while. It goes around that there is stuff on the island. That's all. As for us knowing them, I never knew any of these fellows outside, anyway. I don't stay in the city. I live in Brighton. One time you don't hear anything and then you hear there is something around.

Q.—How many men are getting it on the island? A.—I suppose there is a lot of fellows using it. I wouldn't want to say. I told the master myself what I knew because I wanted to get away from it.

SUPERTWIST

enables us to offer extra miles

Ask any of us why we sell Goodyear Tires and the answer will invariably be: "Because they give you extra miles."

That, in turn, is due to their inner construction of SUPERTWIST, the rugged, robust, rubbery cords with extra flex and reflex by which they take up hard going and keep the tire in shape and service.

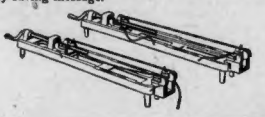
You have been reading about "tired tires" that soon collapse before their allotted time because their inner construction cannot stand the terrific strain of flexing 25,000 times an hour at a 40 mile speed, with 10 per cent to 15 per cent paid-for mileage still undelivered.

On the other hand, SUPERTWIST construction, a feature exclusively Goodyear, means that Goodyear Tires deliver you full mileage—and more. Their inner "muscles" are built to outlast the tread—to give you greater riding comfort—to save tire expense—to keep you 'tirely happy.

Now, with all these advantages, see also the extra advantage of low price, for genuine Goodyears, listed below.

Come in, let us show you how it's done

Any one of us will gladly demonstrate the SUPERTWIST principle which stretches the miles and the value of your tire dollar. This machine makes it clear. Come see it—and get its money-saving message.



A tire has two parts

1 The tread. Only Goodyear has the non-skid "All-Weather" tread.

2 The inner body. Only Goodyear builds this of resilient SUPERTWIST.

Yes, these low prices are for real Goodyear Tires, built with SUPERTWIST

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT VOICE OF DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

GALA DINNER OF RADIO MEN ON 3 STATIONS

The second annual Radio Industries dinner at the Hotel Statler, broadcast over a hookup in which three Boston radio stations were linked for the first time, continued out over the air at an early hour this morning in one of the outstanding broadcasting events of the New England radio season.

Stations WBZ-WBZA, WREI and WNAC brought to hundreds of thousands of radio fans an entertainment by talent recruited from their own studios and from Boston theatrical circles.

A CLEVER STUNT

While the dinner was the outstanding social event of the year before an audience at the third day of the Eighth Annual Boston Radio Exposition in Mechanics building witnessed one of the most sensational events ever seen in Boston when Richard Johnson, electrical wizard, who has amazed scientists and electrical engineers throughout the country, took 2200 volts at 25 amperes through his body in his electric chair.

Grand Hall was literally packed with humanity when a policeman from Station 16 strapped Johnson into the electric chair. As the current was thrown on, Johnson stiffened perceptibly and bled slightly from the nose. Later he explained that he was not in particularly good physical condition and this accounted for the bleeding. Ordinarily, he declared, there was absolutely no ill effects from the feat.

DOCTOR ON HAND

Dr. Harry Rich and Miss Helen Giles, a registered nurse, were on the platform with Johnson during the stunt. After the test, Johnson explained that he took a chemical solution internally prior to the test and used it as a rubbing bath afterwards and this aided in withstanding the shock of the high voltage. Dr. Rich examined Johnson's heart following the shock and declared that the electrical engineer was not injured in the slightest.

Some 1500 radio men from all sections of New England and many other parts of the country gathered in the Grand Ballroom of the Statler for the annual dinner.

Throughout the program, which followed a string ensemble direct from the Hotel Statler orchestra, played a background of music during all announcements, so that there was no delay in the program as broadcast. The theme of this background was "Good News."

OLD TIMERS HEARD

Miss Marjorie Leadbetter, a soprano well known to the New England radio audience, gave a short recital. She was followed by Chet Frost and his Bostonians, one of the pioneer broadcasting orchestras in the country.

Stage talent was injected into the programme by the appearance of Kitty O'Connor of the "Just a Minute" company. She was followed by Will Dodge's Polar Bears, the "Metropolitan Quartet" and O'Leary's Irish Minstrels.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

OPERETTA IS COLUMBIA FEATURE

FRANZ VON SUPPE'S operetta "Socrocco," was first produced in 1879.

It will be presented by the United Light Opera Company tonight, at 9 o'clock, through WNAC and station of the Columbia Broadcasting System. This operetta is considered one of the most beautiful examples of Von Suppe's work. The story of the operetta concerns that brilliant but naughty Florentine poet and author of the "Decameron." The operetta, however, is quite innocuous.

A LIVELY HALF HOUR

POPULAR songs hits of the day will be presented by the Thirty Minute Men and assisting artists in their broadcast through the Columbia Broadcasting System at 10:30. Opening the program will be "I Just Roll Along," the Thirty Minute Men continue with "Moonlight Lane," "Do I Hear You Saying?" "Angela Mia," "Jeanaire," "Did You Mean It," and "Head Over Heels in Love." The assisting artists on this program include a male quartet and contralto "blues" singer.

MEXICAN TUNES

Jose C. Tovar, directing his Mexican Tipica Orchestra, will be a novel feature to be heard through WBZ this evening at 7:30, Eastern Standard time. Tovar appears as piano soloist on the program, playing two numbers by Lecuona, "Malaguena" (Suite Espanola), and "Danza Cubana."

NEW LADY OF THE IVORIES

Eleanore Geer is the new Lady of the Ivories and night hostess at Station WNAC, succeeding Hugh Reginald and Alice Mathews. Miss Geer was born in Connecticut. The past four seasons she has played the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit as a principal in "Jerry and Her Baby Grands," a four-piano ensemble. She received her musical education at the New England Conservatory of Music under F. Addison Porter.

Goodyear SUPERTWIST
enables us to offer extra miles

Ask any of us why we sell Goodyear Tires and the answer will invariably be: "Because they give you extra miles."

That, in turn, is due to their inner construction of SUPERTWIST, the rugged, robust, rubbery cords with extra flex and reflex by which they take up hard going and keep the tire in shape and service.

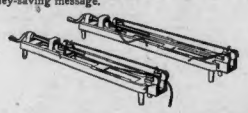
You have been reading about "tired tires" that soon collapse before their allotted time because their inner construction cannot stand the terrific strain of flexing 25,000 times an hour at a 40 mile speed, with 10 per cent to 15 per cent paid-for mileage still undelivered.

On the other hand, SUPERTWIST construction, a feature exclusively Goodyear, means that Goodyear Tires deliver you full mileage—and more. Their inner "muscles" are built to outlast the tread—to give you greater riding comfort—to save tire expense—to keep you 'tirely happy.

Now, with all these advantages, see also the extra advantage of low price, for genuine Goodyears, listed below.

Come in, let us show you how it's done

Any one of us will gladly demonstrate the SUPERTWIST principle which stretches the miles and the value of your tire dollar. This machine makes it clear. Come see it—and get its money-saving message.



A tire has two parts

1 The tread. Only Goodyear has the non-skid "All-Weather" tread.

2 The inner body. Only Goodyear builds this of resilient SUPERTWIST.

Attendance at Martha Lee School Increases

Cookery and housework may be staid and unromantic subjects to think about and plan over day in and day out, but they are being made vital and fascinating at the Martha Lee Annual Free Cooking School, as evidenced by the increased attendance of eager and enthusiastic women at the second session, held yesterday, by Martha Lee and Mrs. Lilla Pauline Cross, at the Statler Ballroom.

The fact that a very large percentage of the women who attended the first class on Tuesday were seen in their seats at the lecture yesterday, is the best possible evidence that these talks and demonstrations are filled with real aids to the housewife. Mrs. Cross fulfills all predictions of being a practical teacher, as well as an expert in the explanation of new ideas and new methods for the proper selection and preparation of foods.

If we are to completely free our modern homes of obsolete methods making only for drudgery for wives and mothers, we must take advantage of every principle providing charm in the home, economy in operation, time and labor-saving methods, and better cookery results.

GREAT STRIDES MADE

This is the best assurance of keeping housekeeping standards apace with American progress in office and general business advancement. Great strides are being made in home construction, in better heating, plumbing, sanitation and ventilation. Standards are rapidly rising in education, city management, recreations, and even in more healthful attire for our womenfolk.

It is evident by the city-wide response to the Martha Lee Annual Cooking School that housewives are interested to keep abreast of the times by intently absorbing the advice of a nationally famous authority on housekeeping practice, ingredients and devices to relieve the routine of housework.

Mrs. Cross leaves no one in doubt about her stand for modern methods, for economical marketing, for diversified menu planning, for cookery principles that preserve the nutritious values of properly selected foods, and for reduction of labor and time in the performance of daily home duties.

The kitchen is the hub of the household, and the standards used there make for drudgery or for pleasure just in so far as up-to-date utensils and enlightened cookery prevail. Vitality and health are conserved to the degree that carelessness and lack of knowledge are dispelled through one application of advanced methods, increasing the contentment and vigor of the whole family.

NEW RECIPES

The new recipes demonstrated by Mrs. Cross yesterday were: Brunswick Stew, English Dumplings, Jellied Liver, Butterfly Cakes, Chocolate Cream Frosting, and Marshmallow Pudding.

Two more classes remain to be given, one tomorrow afternoon and the final big session Friday evening, when the splendid major gifts donated by Boston merchants, and which have caused so much comment throughout the city this week, will be awarded. These remaining talks will be started Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock and at 7:30 Friday evening. The doors of the Statler ballroom will be opened at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:00 p. m. Friday evening.

With the increasing number of women attending the sessions, it is even more urgent that everyone make special effort to arrive early for seats are going to be less easily secured from now on. Of course, there is no admission charge, and no tickets are required. You are cordially invited to participate in the school by being present and asking your questions on blanks provided at the hall each afternoon.

DEMAND PROBE OF G.O.P. FUNDS

New York, Oct. 4 (INS)—The Democratic national campaign managers have agreed upon a determined effort to bring about an investigation of the Hoover campaign by the special campaign funds investigating committee of the House of Representatives.

Should the House committee decide at its meeting in Washington tomorrow that there is no evidence warranting the inquiry, an effort will be made to bring the Senate campaign fund committee together.

Representative Loring M. Black of New York, a Democratic member of the House committee, is in charge of the case for the Democratic national committee, on which he serves as an adviser to Chairman John J. Raskob in headquarters here.

He left for Washington today to present the national committee's demands before his colleagues in an executive session at the capitol tomorrow.

Black said he had no evidence of improper expenditures by the Republican campaign. He will present a plea, however, for a general inquiry into the source of funds for the pamphlet campaign attacking Governor Smith's religion, his Tammany record and his prohibition stand.

GAY, HEALTHY CHILDHOOD EVERY BABY'S BIRTHRIGHT

You have the opportunity of giving your child a dependable foundation for robust, vigorous good health throughout babyhood, childhood and later life. Why not order Hood's Certified Milk and do away with all uncertainty in your milk supply, making absolutely sure that you are giving your baby the best milk money can buy? Hood's Certified Milk Farms, owned and operated by H. P. Hood & Son, are devoted exclusively to the production of certified milk. They are located in ideal country surroundings yet near enough the city so that each day's milking is delivered to homes in town the following morning. Hood's Certified Milk contains all the growth-promoting qualities of the clean, fresh, natural milk, unchanged, just as it was drawn from the federal tuberculin-tested cows of the famous Hood herds. The uniform quality of this splendid milk has lead leading medical authorities to recommend it for babies, invalids and growing children.

They know that the cows furnishing this milk are fed on scientifically balanced rations and kept under conditions of immaculate cleanliness. The milkers are examined each week for their health by a registered physician. Dressed in white uniforms, their hands and nails are scrubbed thoroughly before milking each cow. The cooling and filling equipment is sterilized by live steam before and after use. The bottles are treated with washing solution, hot water and live steam to positively insure cleanliness and sterility before being filled with milk. The filled bottles, packed in ice, are hurried to the refrigeration room and kept at a temperature of not more than 50 F. until they are forwarded, covered with ice, to the user, fresh and pure every day.

A telephone call to your nearest Hood dealer will bring this unsurpassed milk to your door every morning.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT WILL REOPEN ATTACK ON SMITH

Washington, Oct. 4—Despite protests aroused by the alleged injection of the religious intolerance issue into the presidential campaign Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant Attorney-General in charge of prohibition enforcement, will make at least five more important speeches, four in Kentucky and one in Tennessee, in which she will continue her attacks on Governor Smith because of his wet views and Tammany. All her speeches, her office says, will be under the auspices of the Republican national committee.

U. S. Jewish Colony In Russia Facing Drouth Famine

Moscow, Oct. 4 (INS)—More than 4,000,000 peasants in the 12 southern districts of the Ukraine and parts of Crimea are struggling to ward off starvation.

There is virtually no crop. A summer of drouth reduced the steppes to a vast sun-baked desert on which not even the goats can find subsistance.

The greatest problem is transportation, since the best grain harvest this year was in the region east of the Volga river and in Siberia, where railroads are few. Heavy rains in those regions rendered the highways to swamps.

The purchase of grain, though slow and difficult in those zones, is progressing sufficiently to give hope that there will not be any actual famine.

Hardest hit is the seat of a colony of 100,000 Jews. These colonists had been settled by the American joint distributing committee with the aid of the Soviet government. They were given farms which, under normal circumstances, would be fertile.

How Stuffed Peppers Are Made Delicious

There are more ways of stuffing peppers than varieties of a certain famous pickle. But none more delicious than this recipe!

Select large sweet green peppers. Wash and cut them into halves and remove the seeds and core. Prepare flaked crumbs from a soft stale loaf of baker's bread. Season with salt, pepper and Bell's poultry seasoning to taste. Fill the halves of the peppers and dust over with butter, or over each half lay a piece of bacon. Set in a buttered pan and bake until the peppers are done and the crumbs are brown. Serve at once. You can vary this recipe by using little bits of ground ham or other meats in with the bread crumbs. The Bell's Poultry Seasoning is splendid for seasoning meat, also.

COOKING SCHOOL NEWS

To fry FISH
without smoke or odor

1 Put Crisco into cold frying pan. To thoroughly cook the food (for example, a fish) without smoke or scorching, fry slowly, using enough Crisco to partly cover it. It will not require the constant attention of frying done when only a little fat is used.

2 Put frying pan over low heat. As soon as Crisco is melted put in a small piece of bread. As soon as bread starts to brown put in the fish.

3 Cook slowly until fish is nearly done, then turn to brown the other side. With pastry of Crisco in the pan the fish easily turned without breaking, if you wait until it is almost done.

4 Strain the Crisco into an empty can and use it for the next thing you want to fry. No one will know you have fried fish in it.

You taste your milk— You test your eggs—

NOW— taste your shortening!

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

Gas Range Lore for Home

When you are buying a Glenwood Insulated Gas Range, and many visitors at the Martha Lee Kitchen tell me that they are expecting to do that very thing this fall, don't fail to inquire just how the oven burners are removed so that they may be kept clean.

This is one of the secrets of successful gas-oven baking. The usual type of stove has holes in the bottom of the stove, and a stove lifter or the end of a poker may be inserted in these holes and the bottom of the oven lifted out.

After this, it's a simple matter just to raise the long cylinder burners, to clean the openings out with an ice pick and rap out the rust from the inside. Then the cylinders may be replaced and the bottom of the stove returned.

Valve adjustments may be necessary here, and if you don't have a handy man to call upon and are a bit timid about proceeding yourself, the safest and best way is to call the service department of your local branch of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. and ask that an employe be sent to give the necessary attention. No charge is made for adjustments.

I truly can't say too much in praise of our marvelous enameled Glenwood Gas Range with its insulated, washable oven and successful, insuring oven regulator. Two of them, you know, will be awarded to visitors to the annual Martha Lee school through the courtesy of the Glenwood Range Co.

Floral Display by Penn at Martha Lee School

Special interest centers each day at the Martha Lee Statler School in the presentation of the exquisite floral display which decorates the table — the eight-piece Paine Furniture Co. dining room suite. These flowers are furnished through the courtesy of Penn, the Florist—a firm recognized as arbiters of floral fashions. If you have a fall wedding scheduled in your family, you will make no mistake in turning the decorating over to Penn. And they are famous for their unusually lovely wedding bouquets.

Dr. Myles Standish, another well-known Boston physician, left an estate of $206 285.74 all in personal property, according to the inventory of his estate.

Invites All to Moxieland

I do wish that all of you could have been with me recently on my trip through Moxieland—the wonderful Roxbury home of Moxie. I've seen many very fine plants in my years of plodding over this green foot-stool, but nothing quite so unbelievably perfect as this one.

Firstly, we should all make our best bow to Moxieland for its location alone, since, relieving down town Boston as it does of approximately 50,000 trucks yearly, it makes the streets of our shopping and business districts safer for democracy. Nextly we will pause in admiration of the wonderful purifying system, for the water used in Moxie manufacture. This is all drawn from special wells sunk deep into the famous rocky Roxbury strata.

The rooms in which this refreshing drink is made are all white tile, and are washed down every night as clean as china tea cups sterilized in your own drainer. All employes are examined in process white and regular medical examination is insisted upon. The porcelain containers in which the health giving herbs and other ingredients are mixed are all glass lined and then tightly sealed to prevent possible entrance of any foreign element.

A trip through the marvelous refrigerating plant, which cost over $25,000, is like a visit to the North Pole. It is hard to describe the perfection of this cooling system. In a temperature many degrees below zero

Not very long ago Frank Archer, Sr., introduced two new Moxie features—one the seven-ounce single drink Kid Moxie, which achieved instant popularity. Many brides and kitchenette cooks begged for this single drink size, so that their favorite drink would not become stale, flat and unpalatable in the big bottles. It is also obtainable in this size at the soda fountains. There's the club size, too, holding a full pint, two big glasses full, and then our good old reliable largest size, holding just a shade less than a quart—and this is not a drop too big to suit me.

The other new Moxie innovation was the carrying and shopping bag devised by F. M. Archer. This mighty handy bag is specially designed to carry six bottles of the single drink type. Then, by removing the partition, the bag may be used for marketing or other purposes.

The Moxie bottles are washed and rewashed in machines that seem to have positively human intelligence. The bottles are automatically filled, capped—and then washed again! These bottles a second are put on daily—which means that every minute the caps snap on to 120 of the 26-oz. size to 176 of the Kid Moxies—in an eight hour day. 96,400 of the 26-oz. size crated, and 126,726 of the single drink size. Figure it out for yourself by the week, month and then year! Then remember that this has been going on for half a century, and that Moxie is endorsed by literally millions upon millions of patrons. In thousands upon thousands of unsolicited letters they sing the praises of this famous beverage—they advocate it as the one best bot with steamed clams, with lobster, with a roast beef or good old fashioned boiled dinner, with Italian spaghetti, with chop suey, with roast lamb with the wayside hot dog or roasted duck. Moxie for the golfer, for the t. b. m., for the harried housewife and better business woman. One lady even writes at length and with infinite showoity that a serious stomach trouble was entirely overcome solely through this healthful beverage.

Why not take an hour or two off one of these days and go through this wonderful plant yourself—or with a group of friends? There's always welcome on the Moxie door mat and I'll guarantee that you'll go home with the humble resolve to try to bring your own housekeeping up to this standard of perfection. I know I did.

"GELATINIZED" MILK FOR BOTH INFANTS AND ADULTS

Many people do not like cow's milk or cannot drink it because they have trouble in digesting it, but if one will add about one-half teaspoonful of Knox Sparkling Gelatine—which should be first soaked in a little cold milk and dissolved over hot water or in hot milk—to the glass of milk, it will make the milk not only more digestible but more nourishing as well.

In a series of laboratory tests it was discovered that by far the most important milk modification known to science is "gelatinized" milk, which means the addition of Knox Plain, Granulated Gelatine to the infant's regular milk formula, according to the physician's advice. The gelatine prevents excessive curdling and renders cow's milk as nearly like human milk as it is possible to make it. It insures the easy digestibility of the milk to such an extent that the infant stomach can readily assimilate it and so obtain its full nutritive value. The way to make "gelatinized" milk is to soak one level tablespoonful of Knox Gelatine in half a cup of cold milk, from the baby's formula, for ten minutes. Cover while soaking; then place the cup in boiling water, stirring until gelatine is fully dissolved; add this dissolved gelatine to the quart of cold milk or regular formula.

G. O. P. PLANK WRITERS 'HALF DRUNK,' ROBINSON

Robinson Special Car Enroute to Chickasha, Okla., Oct. 4 (AP)—Senator Joe Robinson, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, declared that if anybody believes the Republican party has reformed on the question of prohibition that person should head immediately for the lunatic asylum.

At Muskogee he said that the Republicans had used the word "observe" in the prohibition plank of their platform to make good women and ministers believe the Republican party is ready to abandon the drink habit and declare for temperance. In referring to the committee that drafted the plank, he declared half of them probably were intoxicated when they wrote it.

Kaffee Hag Coffee

Kaffee Hag means coffee healthful and good—coffee without stimulant.

Kaffee Hag is coffee (a blend of the world's finest) with 97 per cent of the caffeine removed. It has been found that caffeine adds no flavor or fragrance to the coffee—that its removal in no way impairs the deliciousness of the beverage. The process takes 72 hours. It is rather expensive but it leaves all the coffee virtues just as they were before. In the process the pores of the coffee beans are opened The caffeine comes out with some of the coffee wax and waste. Coffee wax is the element in coffee which some people cannot digest. After this process the coffee is purer than before. All the flavor and aroma are intact. When the pores are closed and the coffee roasted, no expert taster can tell that any factor is missing. This is the history of Kaffee Hag. It is simply pure coffee with the caffeine taken out.

Kaffee Hag is a coffee that all can drink to their heart's content. They can drink it at any hour, and all they wish. They can drink it at midnight and sleep.

Make Kaffee Hag just as you do coffee—in a percolator or coffee pot. Use one heaping tablespoon of Kaffee Hag to each cup of water, the same amount as you do any coffee.

Crisco in Cakes

One of my greatest treasures is a cook book published many, many years ago. I fell heir to it over twenty years ago and even then the pages were deep saffron color and very ragged from much use.

I am using many of these recipes regularly today in spite of the fact that many of them gayly call for a cup or two of butter. By using Crisco, I can make use of these excellent old-time recipes with delicious results.

If, for instance my recipe for cake calls for a half cup of butter, I use one-half a cup of Crisco and one-half teaspoon of salt.

Best of all, I've had people sitting right at my table and say, "What delicious cake! It seems so nice to get a piece of good-old-fashioned cake. I just can't bear to eat cake made with these modern substitutes for butter."

And all the time they're smacking their lips over just this kind of modern cake.

FOODS IN GLASS DOUBLY ATTRACTIVE

When you step upon the stage at the Martha Lee Cooking School to inspect the foods and equipment, please take particular notice of the attractive display of foods in glass arranged by the Glass Container Association of America. Buying in glass has the great advantage in that you "see what you get." Then, too, you will find that foods packed in glass generally contain a generous amount of solids in proportion to liquid, and you can be sure that foods packed in glass are of the finest quality. They must be, since "she who shops can see."

Refrigerator and Baby

Babies are most important persons these days. They will be sure, they have always been the darlings of the family, the very center of everything that went on in the household but today they are more—they are real people. Their needs, their health, their growth, their food, are the most important topics of conversation in the home.

The modern mother realizes that the babies of today are the men and women of tomorrow, and if they are to be healthy, normal men and women, it is necessary that they be safely started along the right road.

MUST SAFEGUARD FOOD

Scrupulous care of his food is one of the most important guide posts toward perfect health for the baby. It is not enough that the food should be selected with the utmost regard for its purity and health giving properties; nor is it enough that it be properly prepared. Baby's meals must be safeguarded as strictly that not the tiniest, most infinitesimal decay spot or other bacteria can possibly attack them.

Every morning, when mother prepares the baby's food, she washes and sterilizes his bottle, cooks his cereals with a watchful eye on the clock, painstakingly makes up his food formula, and prepares his soup, puree juice or orange juice, and boils the drinking water for her wonderful baby.

The next step is to store baby's food in a perfectly sanitary way. It must be kept in a place so cold that no germ can exist in it and in a temperature that is almost stationary, neither rising nor falling more than a few fractions of a degree in twelve hours. Further, it must be in a place that is more than merely soap and water clean. It must be scientifically spotless

KEEPS EVEN TEMPERATURE

The General Electric Refrigerator answers all of these requirements. Within its chill, clean depths, baby's food is safeguarded from every possible harm. The rounded corners of its food chamber permit no gathering of minute particles of food, and the thickness of its walls assures a uniform, safe temperature of not less than fifty degrees.

In such environment, baby's food will keep pure and wholesome, and perfectly fresh. Mother may prepare it in quantities to last for several days, devoting the time she saves by such a plan to enjoying the fresh air and sunshine with baby. We'll gladly tell you more about the General Electric Refrigerators if you're interested.

Ginter's NEWEST Restaurant

CAIRO

1072 Boylston Street at Mass. Avenue

From the land of the Nile and the lotus, came the inspiration for this gem of a restaurant—so utterly unlike anything New England has ever yet seen.

The "God of Waters" sweeps majestically past a shadowed archway. A minaret soars gracefully into a sky of tenderest blue. Tall palms nod drowsily above an oasis of hidden coolness. Streets, picturesque with three thousand years of quaintness, dart off beneath the brilliant Egyptian sun.

And yet amid all this lure of the land of the ancients—the food, the service, the spirit of hospitality are as up-to-the-minute as today. Ginter—in this newest of restaurants—has made luxurious eating something more than a daily essential, something less than a necessary expense.

POWER TRUST PAID $14,400 TO MRS. SHERMAN

Washington, Oct. 4 (AP)—Returning to payments by the National Electric Association to Mrs. John D. Sherman of Estes Park, Colo., former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Robert E. Healy, prosecutor of the power investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, developed today that her $600 monthly salary has been in effect since October, 1925.

George F. Oxley, publicity director of the N. E. L. A., testified that Mrs. Sherman is still writing articles on rural electrification, which are intended for magazine publication, and that her salary, which has totaled approximately $14,400 to date, is being paid through an advertising firm.

ARTICLES ARE PRODUCED

He produced nine articles which have been published, and said that none of the chairwoman's writings had mentioned public ownership of utilities.

Asked whether the arrangement was still in effect, Oxley said it was and added that it "will continue indefinitely so far as we are concerned."

Oxley said that Mrs. Sherman had directed a survey of rural electrification conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs as a part of her work for the N. E. L. A. It had been shown in the inquiry previously that this survey was partly financed by the N. E. L. A.

Some of the articles prepared by the chairwoman were said by Oxley to have been re-written or split up for publication in magazines and newspapers without bearing her name.

MORE BEING WRITTEN.

Magazines printing Mrs. Sherman's articles which were put into evidence today included "The Farmer," "Capper's Farmer," "The Nebraska Farmer" and "Better Homes and Gardens." The predominant topic of the articles was the modernization of farm home equipment by electrical means.

Oxley said that five articles completed by Mrs. Sherman were now ready for publication, and that 11 additional articles were still in the course of preparation.

ROMA IN FLIGHTS TESTS OUT ITS NEW MOTOR

Old Orchard, Me., Oct. 4—Test flights of the Roma, big seaplane in which four men will attempt to fly to Rome, were to be made today at Scarboro airport. The flights were planned primarily for a "running-in" of the new 525-horse power Wasp motor installed after the original motor was found to have a lobbing driveshaft that threw the propeller out of line.

MEN IN EVENING CLOTHES CRAWL FROM CAR WRECK

Traveling at a high rate of speed a large sedan crashed into a telegraph pole on Albany st., near Union Park, early today. Witnesses told police that two young men in evening dress crawled out of the wreckage and ran away. Shortly after the crash the car, owned by Henry J. Comber of Stanley st., Dorchester, was reported stolen at Station 11.

GARRISON ROUTED IN ATTACK ON CHURCH

STOLEN LOVE

Will Any Man Love Girl With a Past?

CHAPTER 16

THE street lights went out, morning came. Bill sat down to rest on a bench in a park. He must have walked aimlessly, all the night.

"Got an extra dime, partner?" An old man with a greasy coat collar buttoned up around his neck sidled nearer. He had been sleeping at the other end of the bench.

Bill gave it, absently. The old man limped across the street to a lunch wagon, and Bill followed.

The scalding coffee revived him. He threw another dime on the counter. "Set 'em up again!" He grinned at the old man.

"And another sandwich?" the old fellow whined.

"Sure!" Then he saw the battered alarm clock on the shelf with the ketchup and canned peaches. Seven o'clock, and he 'way out here, miles from Joan's shop. . . . What time did she go to work? What time did girls start working in the mornings, anyway? Eight o'clock? He pushed the paper napkin and the second sandwich from him and looked anxiously up and down for a street car.

After a long time one came. On the ride downtown he looked at his grubby hands ruefully. Remembered that his collar was soiled, and he needed a shave. He should have gone to a hotel—he had money enough for the best. But he wanted Joan so . . . wanted to take her hand, talk to her, tell her all the silly fears of the night, fears that he had lost her . . . Joan!

Eight o'clock! Could he have missed her? He almost ran the last block. No . . . the place was still closed. He leaned in the doorway to wait.

Now she was near. And now his two hands were out, grasping hers tightly, crushing them.

"Johnnie! Johnnie!"

"Bill!" And all the color drained from her face, leaving it white and waxy as the flower she wore.

"Bill—I've wanted you so. Why didn't you come? Why didn't you?" Her heart cried, but her eyes reached his face, saw the dark rings under his eyes, the stubble on his cheek, the soiled linen, the creases in his well-cut clothes. The wave of tenderness, the great rush of aching gladness that had almost swept her into his arms, shook her so that she had to cling to his hand from very weakness, but she did not speak. She couldn't, because she was afraid.

A horror of what she had almost said, almost done, sickened her while she clung to his hand. "I've almost thrown myself at him again . . . when he never cared . . . not even enough to write . . . when he can come to me . . . like . . . like this . . ."

She looked up at him piteously. Her mouth jerked. Oh, why did he come this way? To think of finding him, lounging in a doorway, looking . . . looking . . .

"I thought you had gone away," she managed to say, and dropped her eyes.

"Yes, I've been down in Bakersfield for a while. I have a good position down there, with an oil company. I've been kind of lucky—"

She stiffened. "That's nice."

"Yes, it's a big field down there. I was kind of lucky," he stumbled on. It wasn't what he wanted to say, what he had come to say. She's changed!" he thought, miserably. Anger flamed against this new Joan, this city girl with gardenias on her coat. This girl who walked past him, unseeing, last night. "Joan!" he called to the old Joan, the real Joan, the Joan of the fly-away hair, and the old gingham dress. The Joan who told him she'd always love him, and never be sorry — ever — "Joan!" — but she couldn't hear . . .

"Why did you come back then? she asked coldly, as coldly he could

VOTES TO RAISE $100,000 FOR MILL STRIKERS

New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—Plans for raising $100,000 to aid the New Bedford textile strikers were made today by the executive board of the United Textile Workers of America in session at headquarters here. The board ratified steps taken by an emergency board at Fall River Tuesday toward raising funds for the continuation of the strike which started last April as a protest against a 10 per cent wage reduction.

The $100,000 would be sufficient to carry the strike on for 10 more weeks, President Thomas F. McMahon of the executive board declared. The money, he explained, will be raised among labor organizations and other groups in sympathy with the cause of the 23,000 strikers.

"We again repeat that the United Textile Council of America are opposed to any wage reduction," said McMahon, remarking on the fact that the strikers recently refused a compromise offer of a 5 per cent wage reduction.

About $5000 a week has been raised to support the strike, according to McMahon.

G. O. P. Spends $1,194,518

Washington, Oct. 4 (INS) — The Republican National Committee collected $1,054,873 70 and spent $1,194,518 07 during Sentember, J. It Nutt, national treasurer, reported to the Senate and House campaign fund investigating committee today.

The Boston Evening American is a paper pledged to preserve peace among the citizens of this nation and promote the peace of the world.

BABY TWINS TO CROSS SEAS ALONE; FARES $11

Unaccompanied by parent or guardian, Daniel J. and William O'Brien, 4-month-old twins of Foxboro, will start a transatlantic trip from Boston on Sunday with special steamship accommodations provided by the White Star Line at a cost of $11 each.

They are the sons of James Joseph O'Brien, Foxboro, who is sending them to relatives in Cardiff, Wales, to be reared and educated.

When the twins are taken aboard the Celtic at Commonwealth Pier on Sunday afternoon they will be placed in the hands of an experienced stewardess, who has been relieved of all other duties during the trip to care for the tiny travelers.

Negotiations for tickets for the twin babies began when they were two months old and despite their tender age, passports were necessary for their voyage.

Application for the passports were made to Harry H. Bolds, passport agent here, and he forwarded it, together with the photographs of the baby applicants to the State Department at Washington.

Secretary of State Frank B. Kellog signed the precious papers which he wired before selling time by the local British consul.

A special grade of milk for the youngsters will be supplied by the White Star line to feed them on their journey.

STEAL SAFE BUT DIDN'T SEE $500

After stealing a safe containing $500 and transporting it to a field where they expected to rifle it, thieves were frightened away without getting anything today by the timely arrival of three Chelsea policemen.

The safe was taken from the Judson sq. pharmacy in Ferry st., Malden. Patrolman John Durning discovered the break and found the tracks of a truck which had been backed up to the rear door to carry it away.

Meanwhile, Patrolmen Ahearne, Lyan and Martin, meeting at a point where their beats intersect in Eastern ave., Chelsea, sighted a group of men in flight and found the unopened safe in the field. The thieves had fled upon seeing the officers.

LOWELL RAIDERS FIND EDIFICE SET FOR SIEGE

Lowell, Oct. 4—Backed by a squad of police, members of the faction of Aristides Malicourtis, president of the Greek community, today battered in the doors of the Holy Trinity Green Church here and put to flight the garrison that has held the edifice since last July.

The victors found the church carefully arranged for the long siege, with barricades at every door, a well in the boiler room, a gas stove, and a good-sized arsenal of weapons.

These included a loaded double-barrelled shotgun with extra shells, two Colt automatic pistols, one revolver with cartridges, and four rifles, not serviceable, of the type used by high school cadets.

The garrison, consisting of two men, refused to surrender and only fled when a door was forced in.

The church has been closed since early in July as a result of a controversy between two factions which is still pending in the courts. On July 12 some of the faction of Bishop Vasilios Komvopoulos, headed by the Rev. Considine Diamantias, entered the church and refused to leave. Later Fr. Harmantas emerged, but his followers remained, eating and sleeping in the edifice, the doors of which they barricaded.

Several times the police have been called in suppress riots growing out of attempts on the part of the other faction, headed by Malicourtis, to obtain admittance to the church. This faction wants another priest to officiate.

Yesterday Farley, Tierney and Ready, counsel for the Malicourtis faction, turned over to Constable Thomas F. O'Connor a writ of replevin. At 2:30 today O'Connor and 10 policemen, headed by Lieut. Martin Connors and Sergts. Charles Sharkey, Hugh Maguire and Edward Cunneen, left the police station in the patrol, and were driven to the Jefferson at entrance to the church.

They were closely followed by a truckload of the Malicourtis faction, armed with sledge hammers and crowbars. At the church O'Connor demanded admittance in the name of the law but was refused. Special Officer Arthur J. Cooney then shouted:

"You'd better open the door," to which one of the garrison replied: "We'll shoot."

Cooney drew his gun but there was no shooting. The Greeks of the Malicourtis faction swung their sledges headed by Christos Evagros and Thomas Pappacostas, and in a short time broke down the doors.

HEART GRIP IN 'TIGER LOVE'

"The throbbing rhythm of the native drums thrilled the dancing girl to a sensuous maddening rhapsody of movement, which held the watchers gripped as by a spell."

The Hindu girl who danced dominates the amazing serial story, "Tiger Love," by Eustace Hal Ball, which begins next Monday in the Boston Evening American.

"Tiger Love" is a heart-gripping story of love's madness in the heart of that India to which few white men have ever penetrated. The few who do forget the thrall of its mysterious forests, the weird music of the dance feasts, and its rarely glimpsed dancing girls whose amazing beauty is like something seen only in dreams.

Read in "Tiger Love" what perfect love is—and why it has held men and women in all ages in its greatest dangers. Wrapping in his pride that forbids it, one will not out of his love.

Be sure and read the opening chapters of this great story next Monday in the American.

GIRL KILLS NINE POLAR BEARS

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 4 (AP)—California has produced a modern Diana. An Arctic skipper said today that Miss Louise Boyd of San Rafael, Cal., personally had killed nine polar bears and caught one cub alive in the Arctic.

The skipper returned to Norway after meeting the sealing ship Hobby, which Miss Boyd had chartered, off Spitzbergen.

Miss Boyd, he said had been searching for missing members of the dirigible Italia and Roald Amundsen and his five companions.

ROBINSON FACES LIFE AS SLAYER OF WOMAN

Providence, Oct. 4—A verdict of guilty in the first degree was returned by a jury against Gilbert Robinson, negro, charged with shooting Mrs. Hattie Hall Hare to death on the night of June 5. The trial, one of the shortest for a murder case in the history of this state, lasted three days. The jury reached a verdict in one hour and 12 minutes.

Robbins faces a sentence of life imprisonment, the only penalty provided for first degree murder in this state.

Dine and Dance Review

Arthur L. Race announces that the opening of the dance season in the Sheraton room of the Copley-Plaza hotel will take place on Saturday with a tea dance from 4:30 to 7 o'clock and a supper dance at 9 o'clock. Meyer Davis and his Le Paradis band direct from a summer engagement in Italy will furnish music. Supper dances will be continued nightly.

John J. Levaggi plans a few surprises tonight at his Lido-Venice, Warrenton st. Thursday night is theatrical night. Charles Hector and his orchestra are just as popular as ever.

Emil Coulon's French village at Lowell, Westminster 18 is a favorite rendezvous for supper dances.

Young's Kenmore restaurant at Kenmore sq., is producing a good vaudeville bill this week with Tom Dixon as master of ceremonies. The all star bill includes Tom and Edith Dixie Duke, Elliot Miller and "Chet" Wilson. Henry Davis and his hotel dansing orchestra furnish dance music.

Symphony Restaurant, 253 Huntington ave., is offering the Symphony revue and novelty acts of vaudeville this week with three shows daily. Jack Partridge, master of ceremonies, has taken over two new dances which are being well received. Violet Gridley and Deval and Dorothy have two good acts. Pearly Stevens and his Velvetone recording orchestra have introduced some new song hits.

Anthony Bozzini has made a number of alterations at his Shawmut Slipper, 111 Arlington st., in preparation for the fall season.

Mickie Alpert, "il maestro" of festivities at Cocoanut Grove, announces another "theatrical guest night," this evening, assuring patrons that a large percentage of the leading players will be on hand to add to the evening's fun. The Grove is attracting unusual crowds at its regular dinner, served between 6 and 8:30 p. m., without cover charge. Incidentally, the winter in the Grove during these hours, may view a complete show, and also dance to the entrancing music of Jacques Renard's incomparable orchestra.

Morey Pearl and his hip orchestra will feature with a continuous program of music tonight at the Tent Ballroom, Huntington ave. Morey is packing his ballroom every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights since the opening. A number of rentals have been made to societies and clubs for parties on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, and for afternoon bridge parties.

NELL BRINKLEY GIRL ON ORPHEUM BILL

Dorothy Bergere, one of the original Nell Brinkley Girls, whose features for years have ornamented the covers of periodicals and magazines, is cast in the headline act, the "Racconeers," now playing at Loew's Orpheum Theater. Miss Bergere was born and educated at Louisville, Ky., and at an early age took to the stage. For three years she played the vaudeville stage with her parents, the late Fred and Helen Wilson, headliners of a decade ago. It was now with her parent's act that Nell Brinkley saw her and immediately was impressed by her striking beauty. Calling upon her, she persuaded the young lady to forsake the stage and become one of her models.

ALKY DIVERTED IN HUGE LOTS AT PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Oct. 4 (AP)—Declaring that more than 2,000,000 gallons of alcohol had been illegally diverted yearly, Dist. Atty. Monaghan said today the Grand Jury investigation of rum runners and their packets had exposed the methods of diversion and that it would be a long time before the huge system back of bootlegging could be re-established. "We have developed information," said the prosecutor, "showing that in one year 'concentrate houses' pretending to manufacture preparations, containing alcohol, or dealing with pretended manufacturers, diverted illegally more than 1,000,000 gallons of alcohol.

B. & M. PLANS 3 DOLLAR DAYS

Railroad Dollar Days, said to be an innovation in steam road transportation, will be inaugurated by the Boston & Maine railroad on October 12, 13 and 14, in connection with Columbus Day.

Under the plan, an adaptation of modern merchandising methods, a round trip ticket will be sold between any two points on the Boston & Maine railroad for a one-way fare plus one dollar. It will be good at any time during these three days.

Half fares for children under 12 will apply as usual, the rate being one half fare plus half a dollar.

Coming at a time when automobile traffic congestion is at its fall peak, the great rail resources, concentrated by Boston & Maine officials as the "biggest dollar's worth in the history of railroad transportation," are intended to offer the public an escape from the motor car, the automobile at home and travel comfortably by train.

Savings to the traveling public under the Boston & Maine dollar day plan will amount to a substantial sum, as the entire system in four New England States and one State outside is included in the plan, and no limit is placed on the distance that may be covered or the number of tickets that may be purchased. Passengers may purchase tickets in advance to enable them to start on early trains on the morning of the holiday, October 12, and the return limit provides only that the return trip must be begun before midnight Sunday.

MITCHELL WOODBURY CHANGE IS EXPLAINED

Many rumors have been circulating in the trade during the past few weeks concerning the present and future status of Mitchell Woodbury, the well-known Boston importers and distributors of china, glass and silverware to the trade. It is true that the financial structure has been reorganized and placed on a firm foundation, and the company is now to be known as Mitchell Woodbury Corporation.

The only change in the officers is that L. G. Glazier, formerly treasurer, has also become president. W. L. Tallaferro continues as vice-president, in charge of sales.

Eastern Steamship Plans Fast Service

Announcement has been made by officials of The Eastern Steamship Lines that effective with the sailing from Boston of the S. S. Yarmouth for Yarmouth, N. S., and Monday, October 15, sailings beginning that date and thereafter will be made at 5 p. m., standard time.

This enables travelers to reach Halifax N. S., within 24 hours by making direct connection at Yarmouth with the Dominion Atlantic and Canadian National Railways.

Sailings from Boston will be made regularly on Monday and Thursdays and return sailings from Yarmouth will be made Tuesdays and Fridays at 4:30 p. m. Atlantic time.

NEW NARROW GAUGE TRAINS TO RUN SOON

According to present plans the first electric trains to be operated over the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad will be running over the main line of the road by the last of next week.

Workmen were engaged in clearing up the debris at the tunnel near the East Boston terminal where, during the past few weeks, they have been engaged in depressing the tracks to permit the overhead clearance of the trolley poles, etc.

CUNARD PLANS 26 CRUISES

During the coming winter season the Cunard Line will operate 26 cruises on special sailings to the West Indies, the Mediterranean, around Africa and around the world. The forthcoming program will be more extensive than any in former years.

The company's season will open December 1, when the first cruise will sail for the West Indies. The other West Indies cruises will leave New York on December 18 and December 26, January 7 and 19 and February 23. The first four will be short cruises calling at Port-au-Prince, Kingston, Cristobal, Curacao, La Guayra, Trinidad, Martinique, Barbados, St. Juan and Bermuda. The ships carrying these cruises will be the Franconia, Carinthia, Scythia and Caronia.

In addition to these six West Indies cruises there will be a dozen weekly sailings to Havana by the Caronia, beginning in the last week of December

ONLY BABE CAN SAVE YANKS--HORNSBY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

SPECIALIZING IN FIRST NEWS THE DAY IT HAPPENS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

'Get in There and FIGHT'

Miller Huggins, Yankee pilot and Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cardinals, tossed their teams into the Yankee Stadium today in the opening battle of the World Series. The Yanks were full of fight, despite injuries, and were confident that the Babe, with his mighty bludgeon, would blast a hole through the Card pitching staff and bring the world title to New York.

'RABBIT' LOUD IN PRAISE OF McKECHNIE

By "RABBIT" MARANVILLE
Shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals

I was to point out that the Cardinals played championship ball right up to the last day of the season. About the only criticism I have to make is that if we had played that way in the first part of the season, we would have been playing the Athletics instead of the Huggins.

[illegible] games while the Yanks were losing to teams they could ordinarily beat is a factor in our favor. It is [illegible] for a team to keep on a road [illegible] than to [illegible]

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN

However, in a short series any number of unforeseen incidents may happen to turn the tide.

In practicing at the Yankee stadium our outfielders commented on the difficulty of following the flight of fly balls on account of the poor background afforded by the huge stands. A hard hit ball along toward left field foul line is likely to take a queer bounce after hitting the low fence in front of the boxes.

Therefore if an outfielder is not familiar with the terrain, an ordinary single may go for a double or a triple.

In past World Series, base-running has not cut an important figure but it would not surprise me if it would be different this year.

The records show that we have made eighty-one steals during the season as compared to fifty-three by the Yanks. I can't imagine any team stealing many bases on Jimmy Wilson, who will probably be behind the bat in every game.

One of the features of our practice at the Stadium has been the long clouts made by Chick Hafey into the left field stands. Jim Bottomley, who in my opinion deserves the honor of being awarded the most valuable player in the National League this season, ranks with the [illegible] hitters with regularity.

PRAISES MACK

I think one of the nicest gestures ever made in baseball was the telegram which Connie Mack sent to Miller Huggins congratulating him on winning the pennant. Connie's telegram said that Huggins himself was a big factor in the New Yorkers' success.

In this connection I want to say that McKechnie, our manager, is one of the foremost in the game and that he more than anyone else, is responsible for the team's success. His judgment is uncanny and he has that rare ability of knowing the right thing to do at the right time.

Consider what Bill has done. He converted Andy High, discarded by Boston, and the Dodgers, into a real, hard-hitting third baseman. He brought Jimmy Wilson from the Chicago Nationals and placed up George Harper from the Giants, and George a heavy hitting man several times in games for us. If there are any better managers in the game, I never played under them.

RUTH MAY BREAK UP SERIES

By ROGERS HORNSBY
Manager Boston Braves

THE first game in a World Series is a great boost for any ball club, but I believe that this opener, played today at the Yank Stadium, is the most important blowoff we've had in quite a few years.

I believe that the Cardinal [illegible] Alexander and Sherdel, are stronger than the Yankee trio, Hoyt, Pipgras and Johnson. The Yankee [illegible] are experienced [illegible] They know the [illegible] if I've been good at [illegible]

Hoyt is the only real veteran in the Yanks, although Pipgras we [illegible] Bill Piercy was pitching against a discourteous club then. This time he will be up against a gang that will be feelin' its oats all the time.

THE Yankees as a club, outhit St. Louis by 11 points for the season. But the bulk of the Yank slugging was done in the first half while the Cards went smoothly along, not [illegible] hittin' the ball in fine shape when they wound up.

Babe Ruth staged a last week comeback, so there's no telling what hitting will mean in this series. But I'm sure that if the Cards win the first one they will go to a quick victory. And I'm equally sure that if the Yanks can clinch it, they will give the National Leaguers a real battle in a long series.

Opening in the Stadium will not bother the Cards. They have been a great road club all year. They won more games in hostile ball parks than they did at home. Taylor Douthit, and one of the Giants, caught up to them during the race. Both times it was when the Cards were playing on their own lot. They are a seasoned, [illegible] club in good shape.

If the best shape. Unless the Babe goes wild entirely, I believe the National Leaguers will take them quite comfortably.

The Yanks are touch, but not in Copyright, 1928, by The Chesny Wire Syndicate.

18 SOPHS ON SQUAD

There are 18 of the 33 gridders in the sophomore class, which just about proves all the nice things said about Bill Kelliher's undefeated freshman outfit of last fall.

Boston College leased like a first class football outfit in the first game, but the rough-in with the Middies will be the first real test of the fall. If Joe McKamey's boys can put up a good plowing against the Navy, or push over a victory, they should be in for great success in the remaining six games.

On the other hand, if they don't come through, the gathering will start hooting for a more experienced coach at Newton.

The odds favor the Navy at present. Critics have made Bill Ingram's club a 6-5 choice. But this means very little. The B. C. team has enough power to beat the seven by as much as three touchdowns. And again they're apt to blow up in face of the repaired opposition and be buried under a landslide of touchdowns.

BIG CROWD TO SEE B. U. GAME

The most important event in the history of Boston University athletics will take place at Weston, Saturday, when the dedication exercises of the William E. Nickerson Recreation Field, at Riverside, will take place. The undergraduates from all 10 departments of the university will attend the game and a capacity crowd is anticipated.

The president's luncheon, a function of Mr. Nickerson, will be held at 12.30 p. m., in the university hall house. The special guests of the occasion will be President and Mrs. Edward M. Lewis of the University of New Hampshire.

A parade of trustees, faculty, students and guests will start at 2.10 and, after encircling the grounds, will proceed to the flagpole on the varsity gridiron, where the dedication services will be held.

The Boston University-New Hampshire game will be the first home game in the history of Boston University athletics, which has extended over a period of 59 years.

The B. U. Band will make its first appearance in their new uniforms and will add much color to the occasion.

Fuchs Denies That Hornsby Is to Go

New York, Oct. 4 (AP) If Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Boston Braves, is to be traded to the Chicago Cubs he doesn't know it. Neither does Judge Emil Fuchs, owner of the Braves. Commenting on the report yesterday that Hornsby was going to the Cubs for players and cash equivalent to $150,000, both Hornsby and Fuchs denied that any such transaction had been considered.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (INS)—William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs, today denied that his club was negotiating for the purchase of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Boston Braves. William Veeck, president of the Cubs, also denied knowledge of any such deal.

Both admitted however that they "would like to have him." It was recalled that both Wrigley and Veeck issued similar statements last year when they were asked concerning the purchase of Kiki Cuyler. It later developed the deal with Pittsburgh had been closed.

Kozeluh-Richards Match at Arena

A singles duel between Karel Kozeluh of Czecho-Slovakia, world professional tennis champion, and Vincent Richards, former American Davis Cup player, is scheduled Wednesday night in Boston Arena.

FITTONS PLAY LAFAYETTES

Another football treat is in store for the followers of semi-pro football next Sunday when the Fitton football team of East Boston plays the Lafayette A. A. of Everett. Last season the Everett seven held the Fittons to a scoreless tie and the strength of the team is easily shown by the fine performances against the Pete Maguette team. For next Sunday the Lafayette team will be strengthened considerably by the addition of Honey Lewin, former Lowell captain, who will play the backfield and George Simpson. Their star Austin regular quarterback will be remembered by East Boston fans for his excellent playing in the past two years. He is again the big ground gainer for the Everett seven.

Next Sunday William Brids former captain of Providence College will play quarter for the Fittons.

Amateur Games Wanted

The Boston Y. M. H. A. would like to book games with fast amateur football teams. They would like to hear from the Yale A. C. and the Turner A. C.

Harvard Will Use Straight Rushing Game Saturday

SERIES SIDELIGHTS AS TEAMS PREPARE FOR WORLD TITLE BATTLE

Y.M.C.A. HAS A WEAK LINE

Horween Has Two Places Open on Varsity Eleven; Picks Men Today

Although report after report praises the power of this coming Springfield team, Coach Arnold Horween at Harvard intends to stick to his policy of playing a simple rushing game on Saturday.

There will be nothing of deception in the Harvard attack on Saturday, and the Crimson intends to score its touchdowns by heavy line rushing throughout the entire four periods.

Word comes from Springfield that the Y. M. C. A. team has a weak line. Weak as the Springfield flank may be, it is having to bear the brunt of the work at the Stadium.

TO USE SIMPLE ATTACK

Harvard will make little use of the forward pass with the lateral toss will be practically cut out.

The policy of using simple football is bound to appeal to the fans who have been waiting for the Crimson to come down to simple football in its attack.

The Crimson mentor wants to get his backs under full speed before he begins to bend his attack. They will be ready for the game as has been the case for years.

But while Springfield is having trouble with its own line, Harvard is no better off. Two players remain in doubt as they have been a long time in the same fix of inexperienced players.

TWO BERTHS UNDECIDED

By tonight Horween will decide between Dick O'Connell and Jack Douglas as his right end, and between Jack Parkinson and Howard Warner as his starting right guard. Parkinson and Douglas will undoubtedly get the call because of their past varsity experience.

The Crimson will have things comparatively easy this afternoon. The scrimmage are out of the way for this week and this afternoon's session will be confined solely to a brushing up of the signals to be used on Saturday.

Argentinians Down U. S. Polo Four, 10-7

Westbury, L. I., Oct. 4—A hard riding, fighting, flashing polo team from the Argentine defeated the U. S. four here. With a rush in the last half they won a great victory, 10 to 7.

The game lacked the closeness of Saturday's match, but 20,000 persons saw one of the greatest matches that international polo has held.

HAGEN TWO DOWN TO DIEGEL

Five Farms Course, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 4 (AP)—Walter Hagen, defending titleholder, got a bad start in his quarter-final match with Leo Diegel of White Plains N. Y. in the national professional golf championship tournament losing the first two holes.

Diegel, known as somewhat erratic but dangerous when at top form was playing better than par golf while Hagen was uncertain, both using the 1st tee and on the green.

Diegel won the first hole with a one stroke advantage, to 3 to Waters 4.

A choice, 3-inch shot which found a trap cost Hagen the second hole. Diegel getting four to par 5 and Hagen six, four trap to sink for all if and needed.

After two holes, the other quarter-final matches found Al Espinosa, Chicago, 1 down to Jock Hutchison, Glenview, Ill.; Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 1 down to Ferdie Vecchio, Greensburg, Pa., and Gene Sarazen 1 up on Fred Dudley, Los Angeles.

McLaughry Picks Team After Tussle

Providence, Oct. 4—Head Coach Tuss McLaughry sent his entire Brown University football squad through a long scrimmage.

After watching Team A pile up five touchdowns, he announced he had decided to start that eleven when Brown opens its season Saturday against Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Tools Morros took the ball more than 200 yards.

The Team A backfield used straight football tactics to subdue its opponents. Runs of from 20 to 40 yards were responsible for the scoring of four of the touchdowns and the fifth was made after a 70-yard march.

Penn Star Out With Bad Knee

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 4 (AP)—Paul Scull limped out on Franklin field today and may not be able to start Pennsylvania in the second game with Franklin and Marshall College on Saturday. An old knee injury has bobbed up again.

Carroll Rosenbloom of Baltimore worked at fullback in the place of Dick Gentle, who twisted his knee yesterday and will be out for some weeks. Rosenbloom is to start in the F. & M. game.

Among the Penn visitors today was John W. Heisman, former Red and Blue head coach.

BOSTON HIGH SCHOOLS OPEN SEASON TODAY

By DICK McSWEENEY.

Boston High schools open their season officially today.

Brighton High meets Mechanic Arts at Braves Field in what promises to be a hard fast game. Both teams are about evenly matched and have shown up well in practice.

Captain Harry Burton will be at the pivot position for Brighton. Tex Rickard will be at one of the tackle berths. Dalton will be at end, Tom Sullivan at guard and Buckley will start at the backfield.

In the Mechanic Arts line-up Joe Cook will take station at center and Donnelly will be at left guard. Kelly, Valovick or Gilmore will be at end, and McManus at left end. Kelly, Valovick or Gilmore will play left end, while Mullins, Peterson, Colbert and Wilkins will be in the line.

VT. COLLEGES RESUME SCOUTING THIS YEAR

Northfield, Vt., Oct. 4—The Vermont, Middlebury and Norwich coaches favor return to the system whereby scouting is freely practiced, because they are convinced that a non-scouting agreement does not accomplish its purpose.

There are too many outlets for football information to enable a no-scouting agreement to be of value.

Sherdel and Hoyt Opposing Hurlers

New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—All the glamour, the color, the bleacher fans and the shrill cries of the white-coated refreshment vendors that go with the world series came back to their familiar getting here today.

Another baseball battle for the championship, with the limping leaguers of New York arrayed against the St. Louis Cardinals, was at hand and the expectations were that the biggest crowd in World Series history would witness the opening fireworks.

Long before noon the wast expanse of bleachers was two-thirds filled. So was the upper tier of the triple-decked grand stand, the gates in which had been opened at 10 o'clock to admit long and steadily increasing lines of the faithful.

Only the left field bleachers showed any vacant space in the unreserved sections.

This assured some 40,000 customers in the $1 and $3 seats. As many more in possession of reserved seat tickets, which were sold out days ago, would above the total throng up to around 80,000—some 17,000 in excess of the previous high mark for a World Series.

BABE RUTH ARRIVES

At least one of the Yankees supposed to be only a jump short of a wheel chair walked in briskly enough to belie pessimistic reports. It was none other than Babe Ruth, one of the first to arrive in the clubhouse, jaunty and good natured in blue suit and brown cap.

"How is it, Babe?" a bluecoat greeted him.

"Fine kid, never better," responded the Babe.

The Yankees, world champions now, at any rate, and ready with a rebuttal for any evidence to the contrary, were first on the field for practice. They came trotting out shortly before noon while the cameras clicked, the bleacher crowds yelled and the band in left field played, "Hail! Hail! the Gang's All Here."

"Where 're the crutches?" some one yelled from the lower stand.

IDEAL DAY FOR GAME

It was a mild, hazy day, ideal for the game. The sun ignited an unusually colorful scene. The grand stand tiers were bedecked in bright bunting and the national colors in much more profusion than ever before.

The Stars and Stripes fluttered from several dozen staffs atop the big structure as well as from the center pole that also flew the world championship bunting of 1927.

Five hundred fans, many of them women, who had stood in line for hours, were at the gates of the Yankee Stadium when the sun peeped over the horizon.

Well up in the front line, to be the first to buy bleacher or unreserved grandstand seats, were out-of-towners, Miss Helen Meehan of Norotom Heights, Ct., accompanied by her two brothers and John Green of Washington, D. C.

By 8 o'clock the crowd began to swell and the police detail was increased to 320 patrolmen, 60 mounted men, 12 sergeants, eight lieutenants and a captain.

The crowd was orderly and good-natured. The hawkers were in contrast with other years, when the early arrivals were blankets and stayed to keep their feet warm.

Waite Hoyt, the Yankee Stadium ace who is one of the few pitchers hitting his own newspaper stuff, took his turn in the batting. His pitching post had been assured before noon, anyway, with Willis Sherdel nominated to toss from the portside for the Cardinals. The Red Birds, in spic and span uniforms, came out at 12:10 to warm up. Whether it was a new one or not, old Pete Alexander's cap fitted him no better than usual. Jim Bottomley, who prefers his cap on one ear, shared the camera's eye with old Alex.

For batting drill, "Rosy Bill" Ryan, who twirled against the Yankees while wearing a Giant uniform in the world series, pitched to the champions. Ruth leaned his big black bat viciously on a few curves and the first big cheer went up when he sked one into the right field bleachers.

This is a customary preliminary rite for any series the Babe performs in and this is his ninth appearance.

FIRST TO BUT

The Cardinals put on a snappy fielding drill as the crowd poured in. After pounding the slants of Jimmie John in batting practice, Rabbit Maranville, the weatherbeaten little veteran, was the life of the Red Birds, clustering around shortstop with off-time abandon. The Cards as whole exhibited a lot of dash and spirit.

Reports from the Yankee hospital ward were anything but encouraging. Lazzeri said his arm bothered him more than usual, but that he would be "in there" under any circumstances.

Herb Pennock, left-hander, indulged in more practice than he has since being laid up with neuritis, reviving some scant hope that he might be seen in action before the series ends. But the best he can hope for, he said, is possibly a little relief work.

"My arm feels much better, while I am throwing, but it tightens up afterward and pains me," said Pennock.

Earle Combs, injured center fielder, was in uniform, but out of the game and probably the entire series. His right wrist was taped up to the elbow. He had tried it out in the morning and discovered his inability to throw the ball more than 25 feet.

The band played the Star Spangled Banner while the crowd arose. The groundkeepers gave the playing field a final manicuring while Sherdel as Hoyt were warming up. Sherdel had his slow ball working in good order.

The umpires came on the field and held a final conference before the plate. The photographers and moving picture men roved hither and thither, snapping Justice Landis in a box,

Speculators Ask $50 For Tickets

New York, Oct. 4—Fifty dollars each was the price the speculators asked today for tickets as the advance sale of World Series fans started wending its way to the Yankee stadium for the first game between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals.

And the demand for tickets at this price far exceeded the supply.

And the demand for tickets at this price far exceeded the supply.

Ticket holders for the race will be permitted to watch the time trials and tickets for the race will be obtainable at the track on days which the time trials are being held.

Abe Bailey to Retire From Turf

London, Oct. 4 (AP)—Sir Abe Bailey, widely known in British sporting circles, has decided to retire from the turf because of ill health.

All his horses in training and his breeding stock will be sold, making one of the biggest sales of thoroughbreds in recent years.

Sir Abe has long been one of the most prominent figures on the British turf, one of his best known horses being Foxlaw which won the Ascot Gold Cup in 1926 and the Ascot Gold Cup in 1927.

EXPECT RECORD CROWD AT N. Y. U. FOOTBALL GAME

New York, Oct. 4—A new attendance record is expected this Saturday when the New York University varsity football team comes to blows with the West Virginia Wesleyan eleven on Ohio Field.

Close to 18,000 fans are expected, which will eclipse the mark of 14,500 who paid to witness the Violet romp over the Niagara team by a 21 to 0 score last Saturday.

The West Virginia Wesleyan game will be the last one to be played on the University Heights gridiron until the New Yorkers meet Alfred on November 10.

SPEED TRIALS ON SUNDAY AT ROCKINGHAM

The 12 Birds will get their first fill of breath-taking speed Sunday when some of the drivers entered in the 200-mile sweepstakes at Rockingham October 12 step up to the mark for the first time.

A speed of at least 75 miles per hour must be established by each driver, or his entry for the race is scratched and while this is within the reach of all of the known speed-devils at the track right now, there is a joker in the fact that there are 37 drivers entered in a race in which but 24 will be permitted to start.

That means that three will be left at the post and it is a cinch that none of them will want to find themselves in that position.

There is but one driver who is doing any worrying and if the truth were known, he probably is not worrying a great deal. That is Leon Duray, holder of the world record on curved tracks who has had to assemble a new machine to replace the one he cracked recently.

Experienced drivers are of the opinion that Duray will not have had time enough to put together a combination able to withstand the strain without a sufficient preparation, for 125 miles an hour is a terrible task for any machine to face. He, however, is the calmest of the lot and promises to show the boys something in the line of real speed when he finally is ready.

In the July 4 time trials, Duray set a mark of 144.2 miles per hour and thereby won the pole position, but the chances are that he will be content this time to qualify in order to get his car running smoothly. However, that 144.2 mark is due to be shattered for there are new creations at the Salem saucer which are showing marvelous bursts of speed, when they are let out, especially Dave Evans's combinating.

Ticket holders for the race will be permitted to watch the time trials and tickets for the race will be obtainable at the track on days which the time trials are being held.

TUFTS READY TO FACE COLBY

Tufts will hold its last workout previous to the Colby game this afternoon. The session will be devoted to dummy scrimmage and to signal practice in order to speed up the execution of the plays that will be used in Saturday's game.

Practice was given over to scrimmage with the varsity on the defensive the greater part of the time. The first team refused to yield a single first down to the scrub outfit.

Capt. Fish Ellis got off some wonderful punts in the course of the workout and the varsity ends, Arlanson and Austin, stopped the majority of the attempts to run them back.

The line continued to show improvement, especially Luckacs and Schobert, who rendered the left side of the varsity frontier virtually impregnable.

Gene Tobey received a wrenched knee in the course of the festivities, which, although not serious, makes it probable that Brohaut rather than he will start in the first game of the season.

Coach Sampson indicated last night that he would start the lineup that has been playing on Team A all week in the Colby game.

Columbia to Use Pass to Great Extent

New York, Oct. 4—From all indications, Columbia probably will use the forward pass to a great extent in its remaining games this season.

The Lions showed to good advantage in this department in the Vermont game last Saturday when it completed five out of seven passes.

Workout at Baker field was devoted mainly to developing the passing attack. With such passers and receivers in the backfield as Hank Kumpf, Jimmy Sheridan, Harry Scott and Joe Sraneyk, Crowley feels that he can use the passing game this season.

This first team resorted to passing in its scrimmage with the second team.

Horace Davenport, veteran end, pulled in a long pass from Brancyk and ran 15 yards for another touchdown.

N. Y. U.-FORDHAM GAME SHIFTED TO POLO GROUNDS

New York, Oct. 3—The annual football game between New York University and Fordham will be played at the Polo Grounds on Oct. 13, instead of the Yankee Stadium, as originally scheduled.

This announcement was made yesterday by Al Nixon, graduate manager of athletics at N. Y. U., following a conference with Maroon officials.

The possibility of the world series going seven games—which means that the final encounter would be played on Saturday—prompted the change in location.

Nixon stated that close to 50,000 applications for tickets had already been received.

Lewis Tosses Malcewicz

Los Angeles, Oct. 4 (AP)—Ed "Strangler" Lewis tossed Joe Malcewicz of Utica, N. Y., in two successive falls here tonight, successfully defending his heavyweight wrestling title.

Brighton Boy Has Cinched H. C. Berth

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 4—Joe Meighan of Brighton has apparently clinched his position of halfback of the Holy Cross football team, due to the splendid showing he has made in scrimmage.

Meighan, who is the smallest man of the Holy Cross team, weighing but 140 pounds, showed by his running that he is ever a threat of the offensive.

Meighan played in the safety position and handled punts exceptionally well. He scored a touchdown for team A after team B had scored one.

Kucharski scooped up a loose ball, Meighan will pair with either Eddie Darling or J. Dougherty in the St. John game on Saturday.

Henry Shannahan, who wrenched his knee in last Saturday's game, has been confined in the infirmary for two weeks and is not likely to see any service until the Fordham game.

Dodgers Release Pitcher Bill Doak

New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—Unconditional release of Bill Doak one of the few surviving spitball pitchers in major league baseball, was announced today by the Brooklyn Baseball Club. Doak spent 18 years in the majors, coming to Brooklyn on waivers from St. Louis in 1924.

He pitched good ball his first year with the Robins, but retired at the end of the season, returning in 1927 when he had a fair year. He was not so good in 1928. He will return to the real estate business at Bradenton, Fla.

BUD HOUSER TO BE HONORED BY CLASSMATES

It will be the gift of fellow-members of the class of 1926 of California.

D. R. Cromwell, Trojan track coach, under whose tutelage Houser established his world's discus record of 158 feet, 1¾ inches, will present the ring.

MR. BOSTON
By Jack Conway

JACK SHARKEY was on the telephone asking for Mr. Boston.

"How's your injured leg?" queried Mr. Boston.

"I had the cast removed in New York the other day," answered Jack. "My left knee is now encased in only a light bandage. It still feels weak on account of being in a cast for six weeks, but Dr. Fralick tells me I'll be able to do a little road work in two weeks' time.

"I'm itching to get into a real fight again. It was unfortunate that this accident occurred when I was signed for bouts with Big Boy Peterson, Pierre Charles and Roberto Roberti. I am confident I would have won these bouts.

"I have schooled myself to believe that no matter what happens, it is for the best.

"I'm going up to New Hampshire for a few days. Maybe I'll be lucky enough to catch a few trout and also to run across some game in the woods.

"Who do you think is going to win the World Series?"

"Nick Flatley is my baseball tipster, and he says the Cards will win," replied Mr. Boston.

"They say the Yanks are crippled," chirped Sharkey, "but Ruth will be in there. When Babe is hitting them, he is a ball club all by himself."

EVEN the fight promoters must bow to the interest in the World Series. This time it was Gen. Johnny McGann, entrenched on the Argonne front, who wanted to whisper some information into Mr. Boston's ear.

"These Yanks and Cards are tossing so much baseball shrapnel around that the Argonne Club has decided to call in its shock troops until Columbus Day afternoon when they will be sent into action at Braves Field," piped Gen. McGann. "The Arthur Flynn-Louis Bozzo battle, billed for Mechanics Building on next Tuesday night, will feature the holiday show at the Wigwam."

Gen. McGann remarked that he read the American's exclusive story to the effect that Jim Maloney had been signed to battle Jack Renault for the Argonne A. A. at Mechanics Building on Oct. 22 and that Paulino was carded to collide with Shamus at Boston's new Garden.

"The American leads, others follow," laughed Mr. Boston.

"JUST so that everybody will be happy," concluded McGann, "Jack Britton will appear on the Argonne Club's card on the holiday."

Mr. Boston then took the floor.

"McGANN was matchmaker for the Atlas A. A. when that organization was featuring Jack Britton at the old Boston Arena," said Mr. Boston. "Johnny has always rated Britton as one of the wonders of the ring."

Series Sidelights

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 4—The Cards came trotting on the field during the Yankee hitting practice and they were a gay looking outfit in uniforms of cadet gray, with bright red jerseys and flaming red stripes in their gray stockings. The Yankees looked sombre indeed in comparison.

Flint Rhem, the man who drank Alexander's cocktail and made history a year ago, left the Cardinal parade and bringing up the rear was old Alex himself, shuffling along utterly oblivious to the crowd and the cheers. Like the Yankees, the Cardinals drew little attention from the fans as they ambled across the field to the dugout.

It was different with the photographers, however, there were scores of them on the field and the appearance of the players was the signal for an outbreak of activity that was astounding.

The happiest man on the field during the afternoon was Jumping Joe Dugan, veteran Yankee third baseman. For six weeks Joe has held a place on the bench. He was reconciled to watching the series from the same spot. Then this morning Miller Huggins told him that he was to start at third. Joe gave a whoop of joy, grabbed his glove and got busy.

"I'll show them something," he promised. "Watch my smoke in this series."

Both Earl Combs and Herbie Pennock wore in uniform, but neither of them participated in the practice session. It's a sad world series for these two, sitting on the sidelines and able to give nothing but best wishes to their struggling, battling teammates.

There were still a few vacant seats in the bleachers and upper tier reserved stands as the Yankees finished batting practice. The fans were coming in in a steady stream, however, and indications were that the park would be filled before game time.

The reserved seats were slow in filling. Proud holders of reserved seat tickets were in no hurry and came in at the last minute with all the dignity and high hat procedure that is becoming a man of standing in the community.

The Cardinal hitting practice, like the Yankees, were fast and snappy. Sylvester Johnson, the man the Cardinals pick as the dark horse among the series pitchers, tossed them up and Frisch and Co. hit them back. George Harper, erstwhile Giant, got a great hand when he came to the plate. None of the Cardinal hitters succeeded in finding the range of the right field bleachers though both Frisch and Bottomley dropped a couple at the very wall.

Old Alex played first base during the hitting practice—and put on a clowning act that would make Nick Altrock blush for shame. Sherdel and Hoyt, meantime, were surrounded with photographers and posed for as many pictures as the camera men had plates.

Neither Huggins nor McKechnie, rival managers, were in evidence during the early practice. Bill was hid away in a corner of the Card dugout and Hug wasn't even on the field.

Allenby, Landis and Mack at Series Game

Yankee Stadium, Oct. 4 (AP)—In the crowd of notables from all walks of life at today's game was Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, famous British soldier, who occupied a box with Baseball Commissioner Landis.

Adjoining it was a box, occupied by Connie Mack, veteran pilot of the Athletics, who lost out in their effort to stop the Yankee rush in the American League.

$20,000 to $18,000 on Cards Bet in Hub

A well known South Shore hotel proprietor today wagered $20,000 against $18,000 that the St. Louis Cardinals will beat the New York Yankees in the World Series which opens this afternoon.

This is the largest single bet on the series that has been made in Greater Boston as far as can be learned.

Thousands of small bets have been made with the Cardinals favorites at odds of 10 to 7 to 5 to 4 in some cases.

The odds in New York as the teams make ready to play ball is 10 to 8 on St. Louis.

SUBS WIN PLACE ON HUSKIES ELEVEN

Stanley "Woozy" Wrzyswalski of New Bedford, and Wally Bazley of Everett, substitutes on the Northeastern soccer team, in the opener with Fitchburg Normal showed up so well that they may win places in the starting lineup against Dartmouth, at Hanover, Saturday.

Coach Dave Priestly will pick 16 players to leave for Hanover tomorrow noon, following today's scrimmage. He is certain to name the 11 players who saw action against Fitchburg. Wrzyswalski took Hal Goff's place at fullback, while Bazley substituted for Mario Franco, the Fall River freshman, at forward in the opener.

Martha Lee on Lunches for School

1—Hearst Martha Lee

WHEN your son comes tumbling home at noon with a whoop and an "Oh, gee, but I'm hungry," do you greet a serenely with the assumption that wanting to be set on the table, is a meal which if such it may be simple, yet is accepted to his credit?

The modern mother knows that children should have the plainer foods—ones which are easy to prepare and easy to digest. Fried foods are not for them. Instead boiled vegetables, broiled meats when they are allowed, simple salads and cooked fruits served in their own syrup. For dessert, custards, gelatin desserts, cooked puddings, ice creams and ices, and milk desserts are ideal.

The family meals should be so planned that the school child will be served the main or dinner meal at the noon hour. This meal should consist of a meat dish, at least two vegetables and a simple dessert.

The meat dishes most suitable are prepared from the tougher or more economical cuts of meat. These meats are served in the form of stews, pot roasts, boiled dinners, pot roasts or chopped and pan or oven broiled.

Nutritious soups made with a meat stock foundation and plenty of fat vegetables, and a cereal such as rice or barley may be considered the main dish, providing the meat is served with the soups, a raw fruit or vegetable salad and caramel or plain custard dessert complete the meal and offer all the food elements required for good nutrition.

Bits of left-over ham, from a previous meal may be combined with noodles or macaroni to make the following attractive dish

Baked Ham with Noodles or Macaroni—1 c. cooked ham, 2 cs. cooked noodles or macaroni, 1 c. milk, ¼ c. crumbs, 1 tsp. butter, ½ tsp. salt and pepper mixed

Grease a baking dish, and place in alternate layers, cooked chopped ham, and cooked noodles or macaroni. Season. Add liquid, cover with bread crumbs, dot with butter and brown in a hot oven, 400 deg. F.

Ham Loaf—2 cs. cooked ham, 1 c. bread crumbs, 2 eggs, ¼ tsp. dry mustard, ¼ tsp. black pepper, 1 tbsp. fat.

Put ham through food chopper with the bread crumbs. If it is very fat no extra fat will be required. Add eggs well beaten. Scald liquid and add with seasonings, grease small pan and shake in some sifted crumbs, then pack in the ham and bake in moderate or 350 degrees F. oven for an hour, or until top is well browned

Creamed Ham and Potato—One cup finely chopped cooked ham, 2 cups cooked new potatoes, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, ¾ cup evaporated milk, ¾ cup water, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 tablespoon minced green pepper, salt and pepper to season.

Melt butter, add chopped pepper and parsley and cook slowly for 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in the flour, then add milk. Cook until thickened and smooth, then add ham, seasonings and cold potatoes. Cover and reheat over hot water or a very slow fire for 5 or 10 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve very hot.

Spanish Lima Beans—¾ cup bacon, diced; 1 cup dried lima beans, 3 to 5 onions, 1 can tomato puree, 2 bay leaves, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons flour.

Soak the beans over night in cold water and cook slowly for 2 hours or until soft. Fry the diced bacon in a skillet, add the onions and cook until evenly browned. Add the tomato puree, bay leaves, seasoning and flour.

Cook for a few minutes, then add the beans, drained. Serve as the main dinner dish, garnish with sauted tomatoes and chopped parsley.

Faithfully Yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Beauty and Adornment

Need Beauty Be Adorned to Be Adored? ....

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

HAVE you ever seen a beautiful flower that has been tinted some other than its natural color? It's a lovely thing, and you exclaim over its beauty, BUT—"What a shame! It was SO lovely in its natural state!"

And that's just the way you feel sometimes when you see a lovely girl, so hidden by a mass of makeup and so disguised with jewels and fripperies that you simply cannot see the REAL girl.

Maybe she does it because it's style! Maybe she does it thinking it enhances her beauty! Maybe—oh, there are a lot of WHYS—but if she only would stop to think for a second!

Beauty doesn't need a single thing to accentuate it. It needs no adornment, neither does it need a gorgeous setting. Beauty is beauty, whether you see it being presented at court or whether you glimpse it in a field against a background of Nature's loveliest creations.

For real Beauty is a thing of the soul, and no matter what the environment or background, it shines like a beacon attracting all to its welcoming beams.

So, you who possess Beauty—whether it be of feature or soul or nature—don't ever try to hide it under a bushel of makeup and artificiality. Let it shine out in all its gloriousness for all to see and Love. Ah, there's the answer! Love seeks no adornment—rather, it gives an aura of beauty. So, if you seek Love, be NATURAL. In other words, BE YOURSELF!

A jelly or blancmange can be removed easily and cleanly if the outside of the mould is dipped in boiling water for a couple of seconds.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

TERRIBLE!

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Will you please tell me if it is correct for a girl to say to a young man, after they are introduced, "I am very glad to have met you, Mr. Brown?" when she is leaving, or should he say it?

2—Which do you think is better to say when introduced to any one, "Pleased to meet you" or "How do you do?"

EITHER one may say it—if either feels it. It is just a gracious human thing to say, if you wish to say it. And I can't see that it makes any difference whether you are a man or a woman in saying this pleasant thing.

2—"How do you do" is the accepted phrase to use in acknowledging an introduction. If you say "Pleased to meet you" when you are introduced to any one the person and all those who hear you say it will know that you do not know what's what. This form of acknowledgment is terrible. Avoid it.

M. G. M. Simply write your regrets that you will be unable to attend the wedding.

BETTY: If you are sending the announcement to any number of people, have it printed. Engagement party is proper.

To polish a piano that seems greasy it should first be washed with vinegar and water, wiped dry, then polished with a good furniture cream.

"The next washday I tested Rinso for myself. What a snowy wash! And so easy, too. I was through hours earlier, and I felt just fine. No hard work with Rinso.

"Now I use Rinso for dishes, floors, walls, tiles, porcelains, too — all through the house! It's so economical. The suds are thick and lasting—a little Rinso goes far.

Dancing Daughters

Story of Modern Marriages and Husband Hunters

CHAPTER 33

AFTER her word with Benny, Beatrice hurriedly returned to her guests, who, with rare tact, left quietly and without the usual prolonged farewells. Hardly one but whispered some word of affectionate sympathy for Diana. She soon realized that the evening's incident would do nothing to harm her friend.

When the last of the crowd had gone a watchman turned out all the lights but those in the lounge, the dressing room and over the entrance, and a corps of women appeared and began the laborious process of cleaning the ballroom floor.

It was then Beatrice sought the lounge. She found Ann still sitting on the table, flourishing a whisky glass. The decanter beside her was practically empty. Nor was she alone. Freddie, painfully sober for once and not a little angry, also was there, and it was plain the two had been engaged in argument, coy on Ann's part, Unaunh frankly disgusted on his.

Ann shrugged and walked unsteadily to the window, where she stood looking out. She was beginning to feel the let-down from her crazy, and this frightened her—sent her back to the table to drain the last drop from the decanter. She grew reckless again, laughing and jawing at Freddie.

The watchman came to the door, said that he wished to lock up. "Get out, you old fool! Get out, I say!" Ann flung this at him as she flung it at Benny.

The man would have retreated, but Beatrice motioned him to turn off the lights. Still Ann refused to leave.

Beatrice went to the mezzanine, stood there talking with her brother when a man across the darkened ballroom mounted the stairs. She glanced up quickly, saw that it was her husband.

"Norman!"

"Forgive, Bea, dearest! Sweetheart . . . I was a beast—didn't understand . . . I'll make it up—everything—don't go away . . .

Freddie walked to the other end of the mezzanine, loitered there with his back to them. His world had been turned upside down within the last few hours, or so it seemed to him then. For it was years later that he realized just how long the turning process had been going on, and that only at this time had he become aware of accepting the heritage of cynicism Sheldon's non-heritage of caution which eventually was to amount to something very like prudery.

"Spoiled your party, did she?" Norman sputtered. "I'll get her out!"

"No—be careful, darling. She's—well, I think I love everybody tonight."

"You girl!" He stopped to kiss her again before trying his luck with Ann.

"Make it lively, Ann. Can't have my wife annoyed so."

"Oh, your wife! Nother pair of fools pretending to be happy! Dam happy marriage you two made, I guess! Ha—suppose she'd make any man happy"—With a flirt of her hand toward Beatrice, a knowing grin.

Ana giggled and teetered toward the stairway. They saw then that she was more intoxicated than they had thought, and Freddie would have taken her arm but she jerked away, bungling to the railing.

"Guess 'll Annikins can go by herself all right. Don't need to ask I ask—just watch me. Now, then"—

She got down the steps some way while the others waited, unwilling to confuse her by moving —paused on the landing to push back her hair. There was a great sigh of the scrubwomen, three of them, gathered at the foot of the remaining flight. They were on their hands and knees, heads down —fat, shapeless bridges, moving their brushes in sloshing soapy water with a curious rhythm. They looked like big, mechanical bugs from where the girl stood, and it was too much for her distorted imagination.

She broke into peal after peal of wild laughter, through which hysterical sobs found their way, and the scrubwomen lifted their heads, fixing dull, bewildered eyes on the grotesque vision in the semi-dark of the landing.

"Women — working!" screamed Ana. "What are you working for? Haven't you any daughters? No pretty daughters to sel—"

Two of the women continued to stare, but the third stopped wearily and began again to move her brush on the floor.

Ann looked both hands on the railing, swaying back and forth "Daunchter?" she shrieked. "Do 'em up—keep 'em pure! Oh, yes —you have to keep 'em pure. Catch a fren man for 'em! That's what my mother did! She scrubbed floors—said she did, anyhow—I' now look t' her daughter! Look, I say."

She raised her arm on which the jeweled bracelets glittered—the "service stripes" of which she had boasted to Hanna. "Look! Jewels for daughter—loving mother lives soft—sponges—sponges"—

The scrubwomen muttered to-er, laughed. Only another hunned girl—they saw those often enough! They lost interest, went back to their toil, while the watchman, a sweeper and a man servant or two chuckled.

There was a stir at the top of the stairs. "We've had enough," Norman declared, and put his arm around his wife. They began to descend, Ann heard them and h-f turned, calling: "All right—all right" — She let go the railing—reeled—flung out a hand.

Freddie cleared the half-dozen steps to the landing in a single bound, Norman at his heels. But it was too late.

Frantic with horror, Beatrice screamed, trying to turn her eyes from the bundle of soiled evening clothes which lay very still at the foot of the stairs.

The scrubwomen had scrambled out of the way; the servants were running; all was confusion. Beatrice made out a limp arm on which bracelets glittered, a pale head bent backward in an oddly terrifying way, a wedding line of red across the temple.

Then Norman was gathering her up, carrying her back to the lounge. His face was white and set.

"Norman—oh, Norman!"—

"Hush, Bea. I've sent for the doctor. Are you all right? Wait here a little"—

His left her there, returning after a long time to take her home. They had moved. And the scrubwomen were gone; a single light burned over the entrance. It was heartbreakingly forlorn.

Beatrice began fearfully: "Is she"—

"I wasn't heard. The doctor said she never knew what happened. Don't think of it, dear; don't think of death. Life is ours. A long, wonderful life it will be, yours and mine."

"And—and our little son's—"

"Beatrice! You didn't tell me" Darling Bea"—A new tenderness in his kneel, an adoring gentleness in his voice.

She sighed, and he wanted to know why. "You're happy now? You are happy, Bea?"

"I didn't believe," she told him, "there could be so much happiness."

Diana Rand spent a long, dreamy year in Italy. She was alone but not lonely, pensive sometimes, but not unhappy. For always there was with her the sense of something waiting, a glorious fulfillment destined for her over beyond the sea.

She heard only once from Benny Black and felt, when she had read his letter, that she had left his heart in her hand. She did not reply, nor, she knew, did he expect her to.

From Daddy Rand and Mildred she heard that he had called to see them—they were the best of friends who had gone away for a time—he had returned and was building a beautiful home on the hill beyond the Gresory's place.

It was the first of June when she sailed for America, and she stopped in Manor Park only long enough to collect her roadster before going up to the bungalow camp where the older Rands were spending the summer. Their reunion was joyous. Mildred was in the care-free spirit they all had missed for a great while previous to her absence. But nothing was said of Ben.

Then, on the morning after her arrival Diana, driving her car in Indian Point, remained there gazing over the valley, watching the clouds, thinking.

They said little, sitting at the top of the world as they felt, while the sun climbed higher and began to roll down the mighty western arc. And when the sky was flaming rose and the earth a glory, he would leave. "For always and always, Diana? Love like this—it's for always?"

"For always and always," she answered happily. "Love like this is for always."

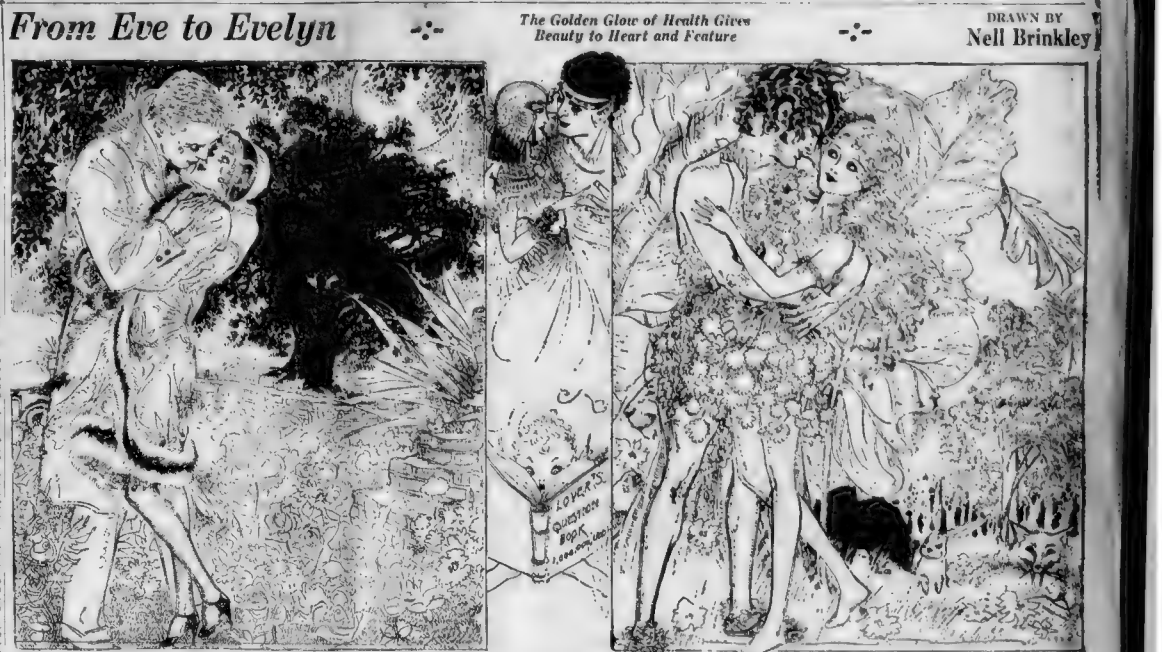
The Golden Glow of Health Gives Beauty to Heart and Feature

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



"NO bridge can Love to Love convey!" No lover's dirliest, most sincere, most painfully thought out, most ardent words can make the other lover understand just how much, just why, he or she loves her or him.

No—because they've been trying to do it for more years than we know. Since Eve to Evelyn.

You see language wasn't written expressly for lovers. If it had been it would have been richer, bigger. There are only the same old words. So lovers repeat, and repeat, over and over again, each dove-like pair, down through Eden-like ages, through dark ones, through glorious ones, down to this industrial, mechanical one, using the same because their hearts are, and there are no new words to paint heart-throbs in. Except the great Americanese slang, and what mod-ern Ed and Evelyn, even, wants to tell their love story to one another in THAT!

So they whisper, against flowing hair and against bobbed, against Egyptian wig and cropped curls—"WHEN DID YOU FIRST LOVE ME" not believe that he had been shot aright.

"Why did I come back?" His hold on her tightened. He searched her eyes hungrily. "Joan—don't you know why I came back? Don't you? Don't you—"

"What do you want?" she whispered. "Why did you come here—where I was?" Unconsciously, she looked behind her as she spoke. She didn't want the girls to see, to ask . . .

He saw her look back. She hadn't looked back that night, when she walked to the car with her hand on another man's arm. She hadn't been ashamed then.

He dropped her hand. "I guess I'm too late."

And now she saw the weariness in the slouching figure, the pain in his heavy eyes. "He's ill—he isn't really happy."

She was reaching out her hands to him again, but he jerked away, jerking his shoulders with the old reckless, devil-may-care gesture, managed a laugh. "Oh, well—that's all right, too. Sorry if I upset you, turning up like a bad penny. I must look like a tramp—I'm on my way to bed. Goodbye Joan. Good luck!"

"Good-bye, Bill," she said. Pride kept her voice steady.

September, and the long, easy days in the shop were over. Fall styles; Francine's harsh voice grew more rasping. The long cutting tables were never clear. New girls came, sat humped in their chairs, stitching, whispering, giggling. Joan worked early and late.

"Poor kid, and looks real peaked," Maisie said.

"I wish you'd get out of that madhouse," Curtis begged. "I never did like your working there."

Joan only smiled and went on working, but she leaned on Maisie and Curtis more than she knew. Markewitz Curtis. He was the benevolent despot for the year to rest at last, to take long, peaceful drives with him under the stars, in the cool evening.

"What makes you so darned ambitious? What do you care about it for?" he scolded.

"I don't know—too busy to think right now."

Too busy to think. Too busy to mourn.

Marguerite Sanderson sold a crystal and Jade evening gown three hours after she stood and watched them lower her soldier-husband into a narrow, deep hole in the green Meadow's protection had come true

He didn't last the Summer.

"Will Madame try the gown on?" she asked the blowsy banker's wife who coveted the wisp of silver and jade she was selling. And her voice was natural and calm.

"I have no tears left," she told the girls. "I used them up, long ago. When he first fell sick. And later, when I knew he would never get well, and I'd left—to live alone."

Maudie coughed and cleared her throat. "I think it was quite natural, dear. "I don't see how she can stand to work—right after the funeral!"

"I don't see how she could stand not to work!" That from Joan.

"But Joan's another one of your cold ones," Maudie told them. "I don't make any pretence of understandin' either of 'em, myself."

September passed, and October. The work slackened, grew dull. There was time to sit around, and talk. Or think.

One day Marguerite did not come to work. Everyone was upset for days when they found she had shot herself with a small bluish pistol that belonged to the one she could not live without.

"She always seemed so calm!" Francine mourned.

Nobody could understand it. Nobody but Joan.

October passed, the first rains fell. The Winter season was ushered in. In Francine's shop stiff, formal brocades replaced Summer's fluttering chiffons. Velvets from France and woolens from Scotland. The "rumble" of Summer was left often away.

Marguerite Sanderson was just a pale, ghostly memory.

"Thank God, she didn't shoot herself on the premises, anyway," Ruthie giggled. Ruth was the new girl they got to take Marguerite's place.

"And thank God for another live wire," Maisie Murphy said, feverishly. "This place was turning into a regular morgue."

Every one liked Ruth, even Curtis, though she flirted with him outrageously, and he felt she was not just the right companion for Joan.

Without knowing just how it happened, Joan was spending one noon hours and many of her evenings with Ruth. Curtis' business often took him out of town now, and Mrs. Barstow never renewed her old friendliness. She remained frigid, faintly patronizing on the rare occasions when Curtis insisted on her accompanying them to dinner, or a play. So Ruth was a life-saver, and Joan couldn't have found a merrier one. Maisie said she was as good as a show.

"I'm so damn poor, it's real charity to invite me to dinner," she'd grin, having a second helping of Maisie's creamed chicken. "I'm the original hard-luck story. My whole life has been a failure. I no sooner freeze on to a good thing when something happens to it."

"No!" Maisie snickered having had a treat, any but more weak assure.

"Yes! And that isn't the worst of it. I could have been a rich widow with black georgette and real pearls if I'd known, but, as I say, how could I tell?"

"Why, Ruth Gillespie, you never told me you were married!" Joan cried. "I thought—"

"Yes, I know. Miss Gillespie. I have liked Miss better than Mrs. —even with my first husband I was Miss Callahan."

"First at your age—" Gracious! That child with two husbands! Maisie couldn't get over it. And there was Johnnie, innocent as a baby, going on 19.

Ruth's round, dark eyes twinkled. She laughed and patted her permanently waved ringlets that had been alternately brown and yellow and red and brown again. "Twice widowed—grass—and sod!"

"But then—why haven't you got the black georgette and the real pearls?" Maisie wanted to know.

Ruth lit a cigarette. "It's a long, sad story, mates. My parents were poor, but honest. In my second year, at normal school, my parents having intended me for a schoolmarm, I eloped with an interesting stranger. That's how I'm a grass widow."

"What was the matter with him?" Joan smiled.

"Youth mostly. We were only kids what do you expect?"

"You see?" Maisie's eyes telegraphed to Joan. "You see what happens?" But Joan wouldn't look. She was tying her handkerchief into knots in her lap.

"But you ought to have seen what a papa I picked the second time!" Ruth snickered. "Oh boy! Sixty-three, and creaking at every joint. Money! He was simply gold laden. Well, did I lead a dog's life, I surely did. I practically had to knock him down and beat him up for every little thing I got. Before I left him he had cut off half my charge account. Good Lord, what a miser! Well—I naturally hated to leave him, thinking him being so old it wouldn't be long, but he seemed to get stronger every day. So finally I filed a petition—my one would have given him another twenty years, honest—"

"Then why didn't you get—"

"Ask his lawyer" the widow grinned "Anyway, after I left him for Hollie Andrews—you know why they are—oil people—thinking I'd at least get alimony to tide me over until Rollo and I got re-married, he up and dies on me, cutting me off with $150, and Rollo's sweep going around about me and him—and here I am—high and dry penniless!

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The World's Greatest Authority

SOUTH, because of his worthless singleton, bids one Club in preference to No Trump. North's holding calls for a betterman; bid or Hearts rather than No Trump. East, by reason of his strong holding in Hearts, would be content to have the hand played at Hearts. But anticipating further bidding by South, possibly of No Trump, puts in a defensive bid of two Diamonds, largely as a lead-directing bid, in case South secures the contract. South with Diamonds apparently doubly stopped and but one card of his partner's suit, ventures two No Trumps, concluding the bidding.

West, with three cards of his partner's suit headed by the Queen correctly opens the lowest card of the suit. The top card would have been the proper opening had it been lower than the Jack.

With the Deuce in Dummy, Declarer notes that the 3 led must have been West's lowest Diamond. If a singleton, then East must have seven Diamonds, which seemed unlikely. If not a singleton, then it must have been the lowest of four, or the lowest of three to an honor higher than the 10, which honor could only be the Queen. Declarer realized, therefore, that his expectation of holding a double stopper in Diamonds was not to be realized. If West held four Diamonds, then East must have held but four, which seemed as little likely as his holding of seven. Declarer concludes that West held three to the Queen and therefore, plays his King upon East's return of the Diamond lead, to leave West with the Queen blocking East. If East cannot enter with Hearts, then his Diamonds, though established, cannot be made.

If East holds a double entry in Hearts, the Ace and Jack guarded, Declarer cannot make the two Heart tricks needed for the game. But if North's 9 can force East's Ace while West still blocks the Diamond suit, the game is assured. Declarer therefore, at Trick 2 finesses the 9 of Hearts. The finesse failing, the contract is set one trick.

The subject or tomorrow's article will be: "Bidding a Three-Suiter."

Today's question to be answered by tomorrow's article is: "What is a three-suiter?"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THE courtyard is a narrow place,
Its smoke-dimmed walls are high;
Its one poor tree, devoid of grace, can faintly glimpse the sky.
Yet, winging hither day by day, a joyous bluebird sails to make once-tales. His song is of sweet orchard ways, a steep hill's wooded crest, and, perched within a leafy maze,

a safely hidden nest. The court is dim, the walls are high, yet when the bluebird sings his lyric brings wide sweep of sky and stir of

EPSOM SALTS TASTELESS TABLETS INSIST ON GENUINE SPELLED EPSUL

The Clinging Vine

By LUCY LOWELL

I HAVE encountered another species of the genus Clinger. This particular specimen happens to be woman—happens to be, I say, for women have no monopoly on the twining vine act. All clingers, men and women alike, perform along almost identical lines, their method being first a subtle appeal to sympathy which wins them something to cling to and then a slow and patient winding of such tendrils as flattery, shifted responsibility, threats and a purely moral gratitude about the object.

In this case, however, it is not one object, but several on which Miss Clinger has fastened herself—a whole gamut of otherwise sensible women, in fact.

She began by a forlorn little tale of hard luck combined with business, equaling it into the ears of one woman with such telling effect that this woman immediately passed Miss Clinger along into the bosom of the group where she was kindly received. The group then set about the task of helping her along with her work. And since Miss Clinger—like most of her sort—has a friendly, ingratiating personality it was some time before those women realized that they were doing most of her work while she sat back and enjoyed herself.

They found themselves taking over other responsibilities as well, seeing that the girl was fed regularly and that her board was paid on time and that such recreation as motor rides, concerts, movies and so on were provided frequently.

It was all very well as long as they all worked diligently at the job of looking out for Miss Clinger, but at the first sign of lagging she was taken with a mysterious and distressing illness, ceasing to call out of sheer wits and keeping busy, a option for hours on end weeping the girl, of course, the attention naturally ceases. And these attacks appear to be occurring coming about whenever she finds herself let down a bit by the crowd.

And now they find themselves all bound around with Miss Clinger's demands and she want a little time to herself now and then and they don't know what to do about it. They fear she will die if they drop her, and not one wishes to spend the remainder of her life as a prop for this vine. And what they ask, shall they do?

Drop Miss Clinger, of course. It isn't only that she is a nuisance, but they are in a worse than real danger that she will happen to die over, as they do in books, and leave them holding the bag, which is borne by the girl.

The secret Miss Clinger is that she really can be self-supporting herself and eventually does so.

'BOOTLEG' CASH IN WALL ST., BILLIONS

By B. C. FORBES
Financial Editor.

New York, Oct. 4.—Will Wall Street's behavior cause the politicians to monkey with the Federal Reserve act, throwing our banking system into the melting pot?

Most of the several thousand bankers here attending the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association would oppose the bringing on of such agitation and uncertainty; but they fear that politics may make political action possible, even probable.

What is it all about?

B. C. Forbes

Briefly, the Federal Reserve law was intended to bring the nation's banking resources under control, and, when necessary, regulation. Until the stock market began to indulge in spectacular high-jinks all went smoothly enough.

Then things took an unforeseen turn. The unprecedented market boom of stock quotations attracted unprecedented speculation. This led to unprecedented borrowing by brokers and to almost unprecedented rates for money in Wall Street.

These tempting rates—7 to 10 per cent for day-to-day loans and 7 to 7½ per cent for 60 days to six months' paper—ought to be taken advantage of by wealthy individual lenders, opulent corporations, investment trusts, foreign interests, etc.

Today the volume of this non-bank, outside, unregulated, "bootleg" money approximates two billion dollars, a staggering sum, equal to 40 per cent of all reported brokers' loans.

This is viewed by conservative bankers, and doubtless by many politicians, as a menace to the orderly stability and prosperity of the nation. Hence the agitation for remedial action by Congress.

Every responsible, unbiased authority agrees that Wall Street has arrogated to itself an undue share of the nation's monetary and credit duty. This commonwealth is not run in the interest of Wall Street, the stock market. The stock market is run—at least theoretically—in the interest of the commonwealth.

The stock market, having commandeered more than its normal share of the national monetary reserves, thus compelling agricultural, commercial and other borrowers to pay higher rates for needed loans, the cry beginning to be raised is "Stop it!"

Well, what should the answer be?

Economic laws are in harmony with the laws of nature. And nature has a way of dealing with lawbreakers, a way of either punishing or curing evil causes.

Admittedly the existing conditions in the money market, in our lending operations, in Wall Street, are unsatisfactory. Our reserve banking system, which was designed to regulate is not regulating as intended. Wall Street borrowers have discovered a way to conduct wholesale borrowing over which the reserve authorities haven't the slightest supervision, since neither the broker-borrowers nor the non-bank lenders come under the jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board.

STOCKS JUMP TO NEW TOPS

Numerous issues soared to new tops in Wall st. trading today. U. S. Steel duplicated its previous high for the year, up more than $3 a share overnight. Motors led the early upswing. Chrysler opened with a block of 4500 shares at 129, up 2¼ points and a high record, and Studebaker showed a gain of 1¾.

Initial sale of Bethlehem was a block of 10,000 shares at 97¼, up 1¾. Universal Pipe also opened with a block of 10,000 shares at 29, up 1, equivalent to a new high record, then hit 30¼.

Easily trading was in unusually heavy volume with the market developing into a runaway affair. Blocks of 3000 to 10,000 shares exchanged hands at frequent intervals, with long strings of transactions showing spreads of 1 to 3 points.

New high records were set in the first half hour of trading by Victor Talking Machine, International Nickel, Barnsdall A, Briggs Manufacturing and National Biscuit, the gains running from 1 to nearly 5 points.

General Motors, A. M. Byers and Bethlehem Steel were among many issues to extend opening gains to 2 points or more.

Wall Street apparently felt relieved when rumors that Governor Roy Young of Federal Reserve Board would sharply criticise security loan speculation in his address before the American Bankers Association failed to materialize.

Predictions by banking circles of lower call money before the end of the week also had a bullish effect on speculative sentiment. Call money was 7¼ per cent.

25 BILLIONS GO YEARLY ON FOOD BILL OF U. S.

Hunger and thirst cost 118,000,000 Americans the princely sum of $25,000,000,000 each year, according to Food Industries, a new monthly publication just launched by the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. The nation's appetite keeps 47,825 manufactories turning out bread and dairy products, soda pop and the familiar frankfurter. Twenty-two per cent. of these plants make 90 per cent. of all food products manufactured each year in the United States.

$237,724,473 GAIN IN FOREIGN BONDS NOTED

In an analysis of price trends of all foreign government bonds listed on New York exchanges, Stone & Webster and Blodget point out that from the date of listing to Aug. 31, 1928, the price appreciation in these issues aggregated $237,724,473 with the investment obligations of Mexico and Russia excluded. In number of offerings Argentina has led with 23 national, state and municipal bond issues. From the standpoint of market value appreciation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is first with $44,320,820. Of the total 39 countries only six showed aggregate loss in market prices for national, state and municipal bond obligations.

HALF BILLION RETAIL FUR BILL OF NATION

Half a billion dollars represents the retail value of the furs in the hands of the industry in this country each year, according to a review prepared by the Bank of America, N. A., which shows that the Mississippi Valley is the greatest fur producing area in the world and accounts for most of the $65,000,000 or $70,000,000 fur catch each year in United States. This figure compares with Russian furs valued at about $25,000,000 which enter commercial channels and an export of furs from Canada valued at about $20,000,000.

STOCK EXCHANGE PLANS TO EXPAND FACILITIES

Negotiations are going forward between New York Stock Exchange and Mackay interests, now subsidiary of International Telephone & Telegraph Co., toward purchase of 20 Broad st., otherwise known as Commercial Cable Bldg., by New York Stock Exchange. If such purchase is consummated it means the exchange intends to look toward expansion of its facilities to take care of the vast increases in business.

GRANT SALES DISPLAY GAIN FOR SEPTEMBER

THREE BROTHER RULE AGAIN IN DEMAND

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Instances of rule of industrials by three brothers are rather uncommon on the big stock exchanges. Recently we cited the spectacular case of the three Warner brothers. Another which comes into the limelight of the day's news is that of the three Graham brothers.

Joseph B. GrahamRobert C. Graham

These brothers, formerly identified with the glass industry, are to be known throughout the nation in the automotive field. But, as we have repeatedly pointed out, automotive prosperity affects a broad list of contributing lines. The latest news is that the Graham brothers have been invited to be come active in management of the Libby-Owens Sheet Glass Co. This is one of the largest producers of sheet and plate glass for automobiles. Ray A. Graham is scheduled to become chairman, while Robert C. and Joseph B. Graham are to be advisors. Graham Bros. Truck Corp. is now a division of Chrysler. Libby-Owens has been heavily traded in lately in anticipation of the change.

Big names work magic in the stock market. Croesus never had so much money as is controlled by the rise of Chrysler this year from its low of $54.75 to its high over $129. Libby-Owens has risen during the current year from $109 a share to $158.50.

Edward Libby, succeeding to his father's business, years ago conducted the old New England Glass Works in East Cambridge. There the big industry of to-day had its beginning.

We heard Robert C. Graham speak at the considerable gathering at the Hotel Kenmore last year. What he had to say about advertising will interest progressive New Englanders. Dr. Graham declared: "In advertising, we are going to tell the truth. We wish to create a feeling of sincerity and honesty, and build up the belief that it's a good, honest dollar value for a dollar. People want comfort, dependability, a speed that will get them where they want to go, durability and appearance. We tell it to them. Advertising is one of the most powerful methods of merchandising."

The passing of Clarence W. Barron shocked Wall Street to the core. Sorrow over the sudden elimination of this eminent Bostonian from mundane affairs was intense. No other single figure in fields of finance more generally missed and mourned. Mr. Barron's remarkable career makes mere fiction seem stale and dull. Another man has mingled with the "vast innumerable caravan" who has left a mark of indelible achievement that will be a source of inspiration for generations yet unborn.

Fred H. Ayers, vice-president of Fisk Rubber Co., at Chicopee, has resigned after having served for 25 years in various important positions. No reason is given for the resignation.

First National Bank of Boston has opened a branch of its Havana branch in Cienfuegos, Cuba, and on October 1 it will open another in Santiago. The increase in its Cuban business necessitated the creating of these additional facilities for handling it.

Appointment of Arthur Guy, Framingham Center, as deputy commissioner of banks of Massachusetts by Bank Commissioner Hoyer has been approved by governor and council. He succeeds W. Jesse Fowler, Beverly, who resigned to become associated with First National Bank of Boston. Mr. Guy was born in Holyoke and has lived for many years in Worcester. He has been associated with State Banking Department since 1923.

I am told that J. J. Dines, proprietor of several sea grills in Greater Boston, shot a moose weighing 800 pounds and with antlers having 11 points, on the Shepody road, Kings County, New Brunswick, at the opening of the hunting season this week.

George S. Politz, secretary of Seneca Textile Corp., and Homer Loring and associates representing important financial interests, have purchased an interest in the Seneca Textile Corp. No change in the general organization and merchandising policies of this corporation is to take place, but Harry Rosental, who has been president, is retiring from the business. Active management of Seneca Textile Corp. will continue in the hands of C. B. Straus and George S. Politz."

Wall St. Notes

TUNG-SOL Lamp Works declared extra dividend of 50 cents each on the common and convertible "A."

CAE loading totaled 1,143,214 cars in week ended September 22, highest level this year.

ANOTHER FILM TO BE BASED ON THE 'HOOFER'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 4 — The "Hoofer" promises to become a stock character in the movies as well as on the stage. He was cheered in "Broadway," he was applauded in "Burlesque" and now Howard Hawks comes forth with an original Fox story called "Big Time," in which he will be featured to all his glory.

The Fox company with the aid of Movietone, plans to make "Big Time" live up to its name. The "Hoofer," a wise-cracking guy on the order of George M. Cohan of 15 years ago, will be sought among the Broadway stage stars.

Walter Wood, who is writing the story and scenario in conjunction with Hawks and Philip Klein, has been assigned to supervise the production. If it weren't for Movietone I suspect an effort would be made to stage "Big Time." It has as much of a plot as "Broadway" and "Burlesque," both of which were ranking New York productions.

MONEY is always a good subject for whether it is dealt with fictionally, theatrically or just in the movies. The Rothschild family and money are synonymous. Perhaps that is why Universal considers the history of this banking firm will make an interesting film. "The Five Frankfurters" was the luncheon table topic of conversation at lunch), but a story of the Rothschild family, has been purchased by Carl Laemmle for a Universal special.

It's a German novel by Carl Roesler and therefore calls for German treatment. William J. Craft, who seems to flourish when he is directing some definite nationality, for he is the chap who brought "Mr. Cohens and Kellys" to the screen, will go to Berlin for the original. He may take one or more American players with him but that isn't settled but it is settled that he will leave shortly to produce "The Five Frankfurters" somewhere near the Rhine.

WHEN Warner Brothers bought the Vitagraph company several years ago they fell heir to a number of stage plays, some of them Broadway hits and others less pretentious. These plays have spending time on the shelf until the advent of Vitaphone and now with the talkies of much consequence naturally they are more important.

"The Gamblers," a well known play by Charles Klein is in that number and will eventually be produced by Warners as a talking film. This play had a big run in its day and is dramatic enough to lend itself easily to sound pictures.

IT'S an ill wind that blows nobody good. Some wise soul made the philosophic remark which is the core Thomas Edison invented the movies. I think we can safely apply that to the case of Harry Richman, famous press agent. Harry and Edwin Carewe came to a parting of the ways, reports were the cause. Some say that Harry was too imaginative. But that didn't seem a great fault to Cecil Schenck who has put Harry in charge of United Artists publicity. So now Harry isn't sorry over what happened.

ONE of the most definite moves of Great Britain to interest America in her English produced films is the arrival in this country of Herbert Wilcox. Wilcox is to London what Adolph Zukor is to America. He makes most of the best pictures produced there. He is bringing with him a print of "The Bondman," in which Norman Kerry was starred.

As soon as it can be conveniently arranged he will give a premiere and invite Hollywood to look at the film. Blanche Sweet, who recently returned from London, where she made several pictures, under and under the direction of Wilcox. He has brought a print of Miss Sweet's picture, "The Woman Tempts," in which I assume he will permit those who are interested to see.

I GET a little dizzy at the amount of money and Mack are supposed to have refused to make a picture for Warner Brothers; $250,000 per picture is the amount said to have been offered the Two Black Crows. You just naturally think they'd turn the dough in so quickly you couldn't see for dust.

But merely flicking the ash off the cigarette, they stated they could not possibly accept such an offer. They wanted to be paid for personal appearances and a 50 per cent cut on profits. Oh me, oh my—and thousands of Russians starving to death every year.

• • • •

I KNOW one thing. If I could go to New York now the first thing I would do would be to buy a ticket to "Front Page." I am told Jeffrey will be in it, a grand play, showing city editors, managing editors as they should be, and not as they are on the screen. I have read part of the play but that never gives you an idea really of the stage production.

I am told there is a merry war on now between Warner Brothers and Famous Players-Lasky for the purchase of this newspaper play. So far Famous has the edge on Warners, and it looks as though my apologies to Mae Tinee as if Jesse Lasky would rob the plum.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Warner Baxter and his pretty wife, playing C. R. Vanderlip a visit at the Bank of Italy. Jetta Goudal and Lila Lee taking stock of the shops. Ina Ray Hutt Stromberg lunching at the Montmartre and discussing Paris with friends. Baby Ellen and Mary Astor, prospective sisters in law, lunching at the Montmartre.

Matty Kemp, at one time reported engaged to Sally, pausing at the table to speak to them. Sharon Lynn in brown velvet, the color of her eyes. Owen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's popular gateman, submitting to an interview. Buster Collier and Louise Brooks at the May Fair Club dance.

"Scurrilous" Charges in South Blessing, Says Roosevelt

Warm Springs, Ga., Oct. 4 (AP)— On the eve of his departure today for Columbus, Ga.; Cleveland, Ohio, and Boston to speak on behalf of the Democratic national ticket, Franklin D. Roosevelt said the southeastern states would give Governor Smith a large majority on election day.

Roosevelt believes that "a flood of scurrilous and disgusting" literature in the South will prove a blessing because it had resulted for the first time in a generation in a definite Democratic campaign organization to work for the national ticket.

He said that many accessions of strength to the Republican national ticket in the South, may be attributed to religious bigotry.

ZEPP FLIGHT IS DESCRIBED BY LADY HAY

cers and crew were handling the Zeppelin skilfully and avoiding the stormy weather, Commdr. Rosendahl, of the American airship Los Angeles, now and then joined the airship's navigation officers.

"Schoen Katinka," as Germany knows her, held queenly court of high officers and public and works officials who only tore themselves away to write hundreds and hundreds of letters and postals which were thrown off the airship with press dispatches in weighted sacks. Capt. Lehmann said to me at supper:

"This is our first supper and night aboard with passengers. It is an epoch making event. Whatever I see or take part in after this, this journey will never be erased from my memory.

"Doubtless passengers will follow quickly but tonight's journey is a milestone in the history of air travel."

Indulgently enjoying the animated scene, Dr. Hugo Eckener, who has been on the bridge the whole day, tired but amiliingly greeted us as we approached. He was a distinguished looking figure in his blue uniform and cap. Friedrichshafen, Germany, is the home of the Zeppelin and Dr. Eckener is a native of Friedrichshafen.

Later Frau von Kardorff and myself, warmly tucked up in our cozy berths, exchanged impressions.

There is no body motion aboard the ship, an aggravating temporary inconvenience. There were not enough blankets to go around, but in spite of the fact that there were about 30 persons aboard the commissariat department did finely.

It is true the drinking water gave out this morning, so drinks the red and white wines, but our spirits were brilliantly sustained on our long journey between milk champagne and kirschwasser at luncheon—mostly champagne.

Allies Protest Zepp's Flight Over Occupied Zone

By WILLIAM HILLMAN.
Universal Service Special Wireless.

Friedrichshafen, Oct. 4—When Dr. Eckener landed at Friedrichshafen last night he was greatly surprised to find a telegram from Berlin asking him to explain several matters in the occupied territory in Germany had lodged an official protest with the German government against the Graf Zeppelin flying over the territory occupied by French and British troops. The airship crossed over Wiesbaden during its 1800-mile encircling flight.

D. Eckner said:

"I set the course of the ship over Wiesbaden because of meteorological reasons. I was dodging the storm area and chose to come up the Rhine valley to avoid the turbulent wind conditions.

"The Graf Zeppelin is a commercial ship and has no political significance whatever. Every reasonable precaution was instituted and appreciate the necessity of avoiding unnecessary risk to the ship whether it is a ship on the sea or in the air.

"I had no intention of offending the French or British authorities and only had in mind my responsibility as commander of a airship with more than 20 people aboard."

With regard to crossing the British coast, Dr. Eckener said he had an invitation from England for a long time and had had as his guests Friedrichshafen several members of the British air ministry, who had told him to come to England whenever he could. When he left Friedrichshafen last night Dr. Eckener sent a wireless to the British air ministry that he would touch English territory.

FATHER OF MANY POPULAR IDIOMS DIES IN N. Y.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—The father of many American idioms is dead. Jack Conway, who under the name of "Con," wrote for the theatrical Weekly Variety, is credited with being the originator of such words as "pinoeka," "playover" and "click," among others.

BROCKTON FAIR ATTENDANCE NEARS RECORD

Judging by the attendance registered today at the Brockton Fair, officials predict a new record for visiting crowds will be established before the exhibit ends on Saturday night.

The number of spectators during the afternoon was increased with the arrival of a large number of Kiwanians from Swampscott, where the New England district convention of the organization closed at noon.

One of the distinguished visitors to the fair has been Louis A. Taft, of Columbus, master of the National Grange, accompanied on his tour of inspection by masters of state granges

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

"The Island"

"Conditions" Call for a REAL Investigation

Commissioner Philip A. Chapman of the Penal Institutions Department promises a "rigorous" investigation into "conditions" which on last Saturday night almost resulted in a general delivery of prisoners at the House of Correction on Deer Island.

Sanford Bates, State Commissioner of Correction, will "inspect" the place immediately following his return from the Prison Congress at Kansas City.

City Councillor Frederic E. Dowling, now en route to the convention of Spanish War Veterans at Havana, is to take steps leading to a THIRD inquiry.

So far as we can learn from the records, the Suffolk County House of Correction in the Harbor is the one and ONLY charge of the Penal Institutions Department, of which Mr. Chapman is the SOLE commissioner.

This being the case, the wonder of the observant citizen must be that the Commissioner is not informed regarding "conditions" on the Island without having to "personally conduct a rigorous investigation." A REAL investigation, it seems to the Boston Evening American, would be an investigation of the Department.

There are approximately 600 prisoners on the Island, the great majority "short term" men. Owing to the lack of facilities, there is little or no attempt to classify them, although an attempt is made to segregate the "dope" cases. The inmates have their schools, their movies and their radio concerts. In the summer they are represented on the diamond by their own nine, the Harborlights.

On the surface, the layout is almost ideal; and yet every once in awhile the city is reminded of Deer Island, brought face to face with the fact that something is wrong there, by some such incident as this reported attempt at a general delivery.

Three prisoners in solitary had almost succeeded in sawing the bars from their cells when the "plot" was discovered by guards.

Where did the saws come from? We are asked to believe that they had been "left lying around by workmen."

WHAT workmen? WHOSE workmen? And what kind of management PERMITTED the saws to be left lying around?

The belief is and long has been that the Deer Island institution is more a training ground for young criminals than a place of reformation. That it ought to be investigated is plain. That the investigation should be thorough and impartial, without even the suggestion of an endeavor to whitewash or cover up, is equally plain.

It seems that it devolves upon the mayor to see that this investigation is pushed through in an impartial manner.

"Abandoned" Farms

Where Are They?

Stirred by references to a statement that by the use of her new resources in water power and coal the South has "run New England ragged," Mr. L. Lamprey writes from Limerick, Maine, to the New York Herald-Tribune to say that while these Six States need no advice about diversifying industry, New England is at no disadvantage agriculturally when compared to Florida or Alabama.

The Maine man's letter, well worth the attention of our New England Council publicists, is printed here for the information and encouragement of New Englanders in general. Its figures are illuminative.

"As a matter of fact," writes Mr. Lamprey, "there is perhaps no part of the United States less in need of advice about diversifying industry, now as in the past, than the six States commonly known as New England.

"It can be seen from the first rather a fashion to speak of these States as 'manufacturing,' as if they were occupied with manufacture and commerce to the exclusion of agriculture. THE FIGURES ON THIS POINT ARE RATHER INTERESTING.

"Some time ago I received from an Alabama correspondent some statistics on the way in which the South had been forging ahead in agriculture, which were very instructive.

"It would be surprising if the States known as the South did NOT produce several times as much in the way of farming as does New England, in view of the fact that in area the South is to New England about $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 65.

"ALL OF THE NEW ENGLAND STATES COULD BE PUT INTO THE TWO VIRGINIAS; all of them but Maine, which is the only State with really good soil for farming, would go into Alabama and have room to spare. It is, therefore, absurd to compare the two sections as if they were equal.

"Even when similar areas are compared the South has a soil better suited to many staple crops, a lower wage scale, a climate allowing work the year around, and in States like Alabama two-thirds of the soil was never worked at all until after 1865, while that of New England has most of it been cultivated for at least two centuries. Also, the New England farm is not always adapted to the use of labor-saving machinery, and there has never been a time when other industries besides farming did not employ a considerable part, if not the majority, of her people. It would, therefore, seem ridiculous if acre for acre the South did not produce more, especially today with all the advantages of modern chemistry and machinery.

"Let us see.

"My Alabama correspondent's statistics on the value of farm crops in 1920 in the various States are clipped from a report sent out by the Associated Press. The record of Maine, whose area is to Florida as stated, is:

	Value of farm crops, 1920
	Sq. M.
Maine	31,766	$84,683,000
Florida	59,268	$86,503,000

"Maine, with hardly more than HALF the area of Florida, produced crops within two millions of Florida's record of eighty-six and one-half millions. And a considerable part of Maine is forest even now, to say nothing of her varied industries.

"Compare Alabama with the five other New England States, a fair comparison as can be seen from the areas, and see what happens:

	Sq. M.	Value of farm crops, 1928
Massachusetts	7,906	$71,088,000
Connecticut	4,674	53,490,000
Vermont	10,212	58,210,000
N Hampshire	9,280	20,000,000
Rhode Island	1,306	6,336,000
Total	33,272	$220,222,000
Alabama	50,722	$240,001,000

"These five New England States, WITH LESS THAN TWO-THIRDS THE AREA OF ALABAMA, produce in farm crops more than eleven-twelfths the value of those produced in Alabama.

"Does it look as if New England needed very much advice to be able to catch up with the South?"

AMONG the advantages possessed by agriculture in New England, our friend might have pointed out, is nearness to the best cash markets in the world. There is, indeed, a

SOME THOUGHTS ON WORLD PEACE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MR. JULES SAUERWEIN, foreign editor of the Paris Matin, says in regard to the Kellogg compact: "The United States takes a world-wide responsibility of which she has shunned the risk for the last ten years."

By this compact, he claims, the United States government becomes the moral guardian of the status quo created by the peace treaty and subsequent treaties.

He says that one should not underestimate the responsibilities and duties of the United States.

What does this mean? Is the United States really coming into the League of Nations through the back door?

Will the Senate, alarmed by the possibility of the United States "meddling with European politics," reject the arrangement of Mr. Kellogg as it rejected the plans of Mr. Wilson?

The country is now in the throes of a political campaign. It is well-known that both Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Hoover were at one time favorable toward Mr. Wilson's scheme.

It is to be hoped that no appeal to national vanity or chauvinism will interrupt the successful progress of Mr. Kellogg.

Unless we miss our guess, the people of the United States want no more war and are persuaded that they can attain this object only by some sort of agreement among the leading nations of the world.

How that agreement shall be reached they do not care.

As they used to pray at revival meetings, "Lord, send salvation by whom thou wilt, but send salvation."

If we can just have peace let anybody crow that wants to, and let anybody that wants to say "I told you so."

At any rate it is significant that the leading nations of the world are anxious to talk peace. Nations have found out that war does not pay. It costs too much human life and money even to the victors.

It is a far cry from this state of things to the old days when every young man expected some time to be a soldier. The young men are just as brave and self-sacrificing as they ever were, but they don't care for fighting as a trade.

It is sincerely to be hoped that people will forget their personal animosity and bury their personal grievances and partisan heats long enough to let this new compact go through.

The matter of world peace should never have been a partisan question in the first place.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"ISN'T that a lovely sight? They're just like two sisters." You've heard them say that as some mother and grown daughter passed down the street together.

Here today is the inside story of such a relationship, written by the daughter. It will tell you, more vividly than words of mine could ever do what such "Mother love" does to a life.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

After you read this letter I wish you would tell me whether I am entirely to blame for my failure in life. I am the daughter of an over-indulgent mother who thinks I should leave my whole life to her care. I am 30 years old now and she still speaks of me as her "baby girl," which irritates me intensely.

When I was growing up she would let me lie in bed until 10 or 11 o'clock and then bring me my breakfast in bed. She would follow after me and pick up my soiled clothes. She would never let me darn a stocking or sew on a button.

SHE HAS WANTED TO BE MOTHER, FRIEND, COMPANION, SWEETHEART — EVERYTHING TO ME—AND SHE HAS COMPLETELY CONSUMED MY WHOLE LIFE.

I am still a mere child to her. I almost go mad when I think there are things I could do—but am stopped when I think of my education.

I BELIEVE IT WOULD KILL HER IF I TRIED TO RISE ABOVE THINGS FOR SHE WOULD LOSE HER HOLD ON ME THEN.

My father died when I was 17. Different friends offered to get me work. When I heard them talking to mother I would always hide because I had grown so afraid of life and I could not bear to give up the easy times.

MOTHER SEEMED TO THINK THAT IF SHE SHIELDED ME I WOULD THEN BE ABLE TO GO OUT AND FACE THE WORLD. INSTEAD I HAD BECOME A MENTAL AND PHYSICAL COWARD AT 30 BECAUSE OF HER CODDLING.

Sometimes friends would ask if I ever intended to marry. Mother never gave me time to answer but would say that I had plenty of time to decide after I was 25. She always delighted in telling what a "mama's girl" I was and doubted if I would ever be able to leave her.

The greatest disappointment of all to me was my failure to do my part in the war. Mother took a very active part, but she was never willing for me to visit any of the hospitals, for she was afraid I couldn't stand the suffering. So again I stood back.

But I did break free at last—in a terrific way. I resolved to do everything I had been shielded from. And as a consequence, I have made a mess of everything, for I cannot be strong. I can only be cowardly and sneaky. Today I have no morals, no self-respect, no ambition, no religion. I have tried to hold seven different jobs, but I have been fired from every one. We're reduced to living with relations, with whom I quarrel incessantly. I am filled with hate, resentment and a terrible sense of failure. I have suicidal, many times of suicide and tried to run away once. This is what my mother's sheltering love has done. I blame me and say that I am unlike me. I know that many will worthy of her. But do you think it is my fault, Elsie Robinson?

I do not, my dear. I think your mother poisoned you for her own selfish ends and I think, though she had fed you arsenic. Perhaps now that you have freed your heart you'll be able to take a fresh grip—I hope so. And I also hope that your letter incites other "mama's girls" to red-handed rebellion.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The world is an old woman, and mistaken any gilt farthing for a gold coin.—Carlyle.

When a man puts on a character he is a stranger to, there's as much difference between what he appears and what he is really in himself, as there is between a visor and a face.—La Bruyere.

There is nothing so disagreeable that a patient mind cannot find some solace for.—Seneca.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—There are some 3000 persons in New York who walk in darkness. Few cities are more thoughtful of the blind. Among several institutions to aid them is the New York Lighthouse for the Blind on E. 59th st.

Here those who suddenly find themselves groping in eternal night are comforted and aided in becoming reconciled to their fate. They are also taught trades that make them self-supporting, and learn their greatest comfort of all—the Braille system.

It has been noticed that those stricken blind react and take an interest in living in from four to six weeks. During that agonizing interim they usually sit about in abject dejection as one physically and mentally stunned.

Oddly enough, there is almost always a law of compensation in operation for the blind. Those who have become accustomed to their affliction are invariably smiling and happy. They have a keen zest for the theater and other public amusements and are especially fond of music.

On First avenue near 24th street is a several-storied brick building which houses The Blind Men's Club. Here they come during leisure periods to converse, play games, read and otherwise fraternize just as people do in the average club.

Two blind beggars, known as Damon and Pythias, cross 42nd street every morning arm in arm, separate at the library corner to go to their stands. Shortly before dusk they meet there again and tap their way home to Third Avenue. They are always chatting happily.

There is a superstition among theatrical people if it be bad luck to pass a blind man without dropping a coin in his cup, and consequently most of those who seek alms do so at posts along the Rialto. If one doubts Broadway's generosity he has only to ask a blind man.

AN unusual sightless character in New York's midtown is Blind George. He was born blind and has been able to support himself and his wife comfortably conducting a newspaper hutch. For years he held forth in Herald Square, and one morning he came to work and found his stand must come down that day for a new building.

Two days later he was the owner of a larger and better stand on a Bryant Park corner—a tribute to the quick helping hand of Broadway in distress. Not one donor gave his name.

Blind George knows his customers by voices and calls them by name. Men who have been away for a year or more return to his place and are instantly greeted by name. He is a cheerful soul and a fount of gossip of Broadway and its doings.

ON Second Avenue in the Ghetto there is a blind cafe pianist who belies the belief the blind do not enjoy smoking tobacco. While he plays he puffs constantly at a cigar.

IN Chinatown there used to be a pair of young blind buskers who moved from saloon to saloon to clog dance for pitched coins. They were twins and had been made sightless by the explosion of a Fourth of July toy cannon.

ONE of the most famous of the New York merchants was a blind man known all over America as "Broadway Roush." He built up a gigantic business and left an estate worth several millions.

NEW YORK'S official reception committees operate with the dash and precision of a set of Tiller dancing girls, but what gripes many of us catching at our thumbs is their method of occupying all the choice seats in the parade carriages and thereby completely hiding the distinguished visitors. In five efforts to peek at arriving heroes and heroines, I've seen only reception committees, and from now on I intend to remain home and catch up with the funny papers.

Ten Years From Now

Vacation—1938 Style

What sort of vacations are sport-loving young couples going to be taking in 1938?

We get an idea from the London newspaper accounts of the round-the-world air tour being taken by Vicomte and Vicomtesse Jacques de Sibour in a tiny $2250 Moth airplane, using hourly four and a half gallons of gas and not quite a pint of oil.

De Sibour works in the Selfridge store. When he got a two weeks' holiday he and his wife toured around the Mediterranean in a little airplane. Then came a longer vacation; they flew to the mountainous wilderness of Abyssinia. Now, on a nine months' furlough, they are on their way to fly round the world, except for being carried across the great oceans by boat.

Too expensive? Jacques says, "The running expenses come to $16 per week at a maximum."

Dear Elsie Robinson:

After you read this letter I wish you would tell me whether I am entirely to blame for my failure in life. I am the daughter of an over-indulgent mother who thinks I should leave my whole life to her care. I am 30 years old now and she still speaks of me as her "baby girl," which irritates me intensely.

When I was growing up she would let me lie in bed until 10 or 11 o'clock and then bring me my breakfast in bed. She would follow after me and pick up my soiled clothes. She would never let me darn a stocking or sew on a button.

SHE HAS WANTED TO BE MOTHER, FRIEND, COMPANION, SWEETHEART — EVERYTHING TO ME—AND SHE HAS COMPLETELY CONSUMED MY WHOLE LIFE.

I am still a mere child to her. I almost go mad when I think there are things I could do—but am stopped when I think of my education.

I BELIEVE IT WOULD KILL HER IF I TRIED TO RISE ABOVE THINGS FOR SHE WOULD LOSE HER HOLD ON ME THEN.

My father died when I was 17. Different friends offered to get me work. When I heard them talking to mother I would always hide because I had grown so afraid of life and I could not bear to give up the easy times.

MOTHER SEEMED TO THINK THAT IF SHE SHIELDED ME I WOULD THEN BE ABLE TO GO OUT AND FACE THE WORLD. INSTEAD I HAD BECOME A MENTAL AND PHYSICAL COWARD AT 30 BECAUSE OF HER CODDLING.

Sometimes friends would ask if I ever intended to marry. Mother never gave me time to answer but would say that I had plenty of time to decide after I was 25. She always delighted in telling what a "mama's girl" I was and doubted if I would ever be able to leave her.

The greatest disappointment of all to me was my failure to do my part in the war. Mother took a very active part, but she was never willing for me to visit any of the hospitals, for she was afraid I couldn't stand the suffering. So again I stood back.

But I did break free at last—in a terrific way. I resolved to do everything I had been shielded from. And as a consequence, I have made a mess of everything, for I cannot be strong. I can only be cowardly and sneaky. Today I have no morals, no self-respect, no ambition, no religion. I have tried to hold seven different jobs, but I have been fired from every one. We're reduced to living with relations, with whom I quarrel incessantly. I am filled with hate, resentment and a terrible sense of failure. I have suicidal, many times of suicide and tried to run away once. This is what my mother's sheltering love has done. I blame me and say that I am unlike me. I know that many will worthy of her. But do you think it is my fault, Elsie Robinson?

I do not, my dear. I think your mother poisoned you for her own selfish ends and I think, though she had fed you arsenic. Perhaps now that you have freed your heart you'll be able to take a fresh grip—I hope so. And I also hope that your letter incites other "mama's girls" to red-handed rebellion.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The world is an old woman, and mistaken any gilt farthing for a gold coin.—Carlyle.

When a man puts on a character he is a stranger to, there's as much difference between what he appears and what he is really in himself, as there is between a visor and a face.—La Bruyere.

There is nothing so disagreeable that a patient mind cannot find some solace for.—Seneca.

New York Day by Day

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—There are some 3000 persons in New York who walk in darkness. Few cities are more thoughtful of the blind. Among several institutions to aid them is the New York Lighthouse for the Blind on E. 59th st.

Here those who suddenly find themselves groping in eternal night are comforted and aided in becoming reconciled to their fate. They are also taught trades that make them self-supporting, and learn their greatest comfort of all—the Braille system.

It has been noticed that those stricken blind react and take an interest in living in from four to six weeks. During that agonizing interim they usually sit about in abject dejection as one physically and mentally stunned.

Oddly enough, there is almost always a law of compensation in operation for the blind. Those who have become accustomed to their affliction are invariably smiling and happy. They have a keen zest for the theater and other public amusements and are especially fond of music.

On First avenue near 24th street is a several-storied brick building which houses The Blind Men's Club. Here they come during leisure periods to converse, play games, read and otherwise fraternize just as people do in the average club.

Two blind beggars, known as Damon and Pythias, cross 42nd street every morning arm in arm, separate at the library corner to go to their stands. Shortly before dusk they meet there again and tap their way home to Third Avenue. They are always chatting happily.

There is a superstition among theatrical people if it be bad luck to pass a blind man without dropping a coin in his cup, and consequently most of those who seek alms do so at posts along the Rialto. If one doubts Broadway's generosity he has only to ask a blind man.

AN unusual sightless character in New York's midtown is Blind George. He was born blind and has been able to support himself and his wife comfortably conducting a newspaper hutch. For years he held forth in Herald Square, and one morning he came to work and found his stand must come down that day for a new building.

Two days later he was the owner of a larger and better stand on a Bryant Park corner—a tribute to the quick helping hand of Broadway in distress. Not one donor gave his name.

Blind George knows his customers by voices and calls them by name. Men who have been away for a year or more return to his place and are instantly greeted by name. He is a cheerful soul and a fount of gossip of Broadway and its doings.

ON Second Avenue in the Ghetto there is a blind cafe pianist who belies the belief the blind do not enjoy smoking tobacco. While he plays he puffs constantly at a cigar.

IN Chinatown there used to be a pair of young blind buskers who moved from saloon to saloon to clog dance for pitched coins. They were twins and had been made sightless by the explosion of a Fourth of July toy cannon.

ONE of the most famous of the New York merchants was a blind man known all over America as "Broadway Roush." He built up a gigantic business and left an estate worth several millions.

NEW YORK'S official reception committees operate with the dash and precision of a set of Tiller dancing girls, but what gripes many of us catching at our thumbs is their method of occupying all the choice seats in the parade carriages and thereby completely hiding the distinguished visitors. In five efforts to peek at arriving heroes and heroines, I've seen only reception committees, and from now on I intend to remain home and catch up with the funny papers.

Ten Years From Now

Vacation—1938 Style

What sort of vacations are sport-loving young couples going to be taking in 1938?

We get an idea from the London newspaper accounts of the round-the-world air tour being taken by Vicomte and Vicomtesse Jacques de Sibour in a tiny $2250 Moth airplane, using hourly four and a half gallons of gas and not quite a pint of oil.

De Sibour works in the Selfridge store. When he got a two weeks' holiday he and his wife toured around the Mediterranean in a little airplane. Then came a longer vacation; they flew to the mountainous wilderness of Abyssinia. Now, on a nine months' furlough, they are on their way to fly round the world, except for being carried across the great oceans by boat.

Too expensive? Jacques says, "The running expenses come to $16 per week at a maximum."

"Abandoned" Farms

HOME market for MORE than the farms of New England can produce.

It does the heart good to hear occasionally from someone who, writing competently on the subject, does something more than deny the intimation—never actually made by anyone worthy of serious attention—that New England is "slipping."

The York County writer gives chapter and verse, to prove that New England agriculture, as well as New England manufacture, is looking up.
